Storms batter Carmel coast

THE FURY of Mother Nature wreaked havoc along Carmel Beach the past couple of weeks. The brunt of the damage was felt in late January when the stairway at the foot of Scenic Road near 10th Avenue collapsed after it was battered by high tides (above). Below, the beach at the mouth of the Carmel River was strewn with debris washed ashore by the highest tides in recent memory. Despite the fury of the late January storm and continual rains last weekend, Carmel escaped relatively unscathed. City officials now face the problem of cleaning up. See related story and more photographs on page 8. (Bill Brooks photos.)

Parents angered by school raises

By MICHAEL GARDNER

PARENT GROUPS are so angry over a 3 percent pay raise for administrators that members say they will have to reassess their financial and moral support for the Carmel Unified School District.

That was the message Wednesday from presidents of two of the largest and most powerful parent groups in the district — The Friends of the Carmel Unified Schools (FOCUS) and the Carmel High School Padre Parents Club.

School trustees voted 3-2 Tuesday night to grant the salary hike to all administrators, which will cost the district an estimated $23,000. The pay raises are retroactive to July 1, 1982.

Administrators will also receive up to an additional 5 percent pay hike if the district receives more funds from outside sources other than already anticipated.

The 3 percent hike, plus 5 percent more based on contingencies is the same offer accepted by teachers and classified staff earlier this school year.

Trustees Tuesday also granted Supt. William Rand a flat 5 percent salary increase without provisions for an additional raise if other funds become available. The action boosted Rand's annual salary to $48,500.

The pay raises were granted on a split 3-2 vote. Trustees

Forest is threatened

Dear Editor:

The Del Monte Forest is in imminent peril. A development scheme calling for a three-story, 275-room luxury hotel at Spanish Bay, condominiums and nearly 1,400 dwelling units slated for subdivision throughout the remaining forest land may well spell doom for this priceless national treasure.

Marvin Davis, a Denver oil billionaire who owns 20th Century Fox Film Corp., and the giant Aetna Life and Casualty Co. are behind the poorly planned real estate venture. Locally, it is the pride and joy of Fourth and Fifth District Monterey County supervisors, Michal Moore and William Peters. It even bears their name, the "Peters/Moore" plan.

If approved, the Peters/Moore plan will result in the loss of more than 50,000 trees, the loss of private property water rights (the plan gives priority to water to the commercial interests), increased taxes for residents of Pacific Grove, Monterey and Carmel to handle the burden of increased traffic to name but a few of the serious impacts this plan would create.

The good people of the Monterey Peninsula can stop this madness. The FOG Task Force to Preserve Del Monte Forest has requested that the California Coastal Commission move its public hearing on this important local coastal plan to Monterey in order that all concerned citizens can testify and make known their concerns.

Support human rights

Dear Editor:

Current guidelines make eligibility for U.S. aid dependent, in theory, on a country's human-rights record. Unfortunately, this noble goal is seldom pursued by the Reagan administration.

American travelers who are upset by this neglect and who want to get a peaceful good night's sleep should, therefore, do their own "grading" while planning their next foreign vacations.

If you're still among the fortunate ones who are working and able to afford foreign travel, don't let your vacation dollars support military dictators whose dismal human-rights records include rape, torture and murder of innocent civilians. You can conduct foreign policy on a personal level by exercising your right to travel with greater discernment and responsibility.

By showing more concern for human life and rights in selecting foreign countries to visit, America's vacationists with their hearts in the right place become like emissaries for world peace.

'People, not missiles'

Dear Editor:

The party that wants my vote in 1984 is going to have to get its act together.

The candidate that wants my vote is going to have to pare down his life-style to at least appear to be compassionate.

I've had it with puerile rhetoric about this country's being in the mess it's in because the Democrats were in power and/or the Republicans were out of power. Anyone who can watch the tube knows inflation, unemployment and growing hopelessness is world-wide, not an American political party invention.

Countries all over this planet owe the United States money. Mexico owes us billions of dollars. Are we foreclosing on Mexico? Of course not. We're making financial arrangements to bail out Mexico and foreclosing on American farmers, miners, factory workers. These aren't the alleged deadbeats so dear to the artificial heart of the current administration. These citizens being driven into a jobless, homeless street have fought this country's wars, paid its taxes, obeyed its laws.

You call this government? I call it insanity.

Any political party that would rather house missiles than its own people is not going to get my vote.

Any political candidate who hasn't the political savvy to know that a country's strongest weapon is its own people fed, housed, healthy, educated, working as positive participants in government is not going to get my vote.

Will cut payments

Pacific Telephone
Billing Department
To whomever is to blame:

My forehead is still recovering from the slap of surprise it received when I read in the newspaper that you want to raise rates! You say that due to the recession, your reduced demand for service (meaning low profits) has fallen far short of your forecasts and that competition has made "serious inroads" to your profit picture.

What a coincidence! You see, I'm also in business for myself and I too have noticed that the recession has caused my profit projections to fall far short of my expectations. And because I felt so secure in my position, somebody else has started taking business that I always thought I had a right to!

Well, after days of pointless soul-searching (you know the feeling) I must say that if the PUC grants you permission to double your rates, I will cut my monthly payments to you by half. I'm sure you'll understand since your logic is the model for my thinking on this matter.

Piccadilly and plan

Dear Editor:

Your editorial linking the Piccadilly Park with Carmel's parking problem deserves comment.

In the first place, it was a mistake for the city council to place the question of whether the city should purchase Piccadilly Park on the ballot just as it would be a mistake now to put a decision to sell the property to a vote. Why? There are two reasons. First of all, the result of such a referendum, even though merely advisory, places the city at a great disadvantage in the resulting bargaining process and undoubtedly influences the final price paid.

More importantly decision regarding the acquisition or disposal of property should be based, without exception, on policies established through the General Plan process. For your information, the 1973 General Plan lists acquisitions and conservation of open space as one of the major objectives to be pursued. The revised plan, when approved, may reaffirm, modify or reject that particular objective and future city councils must, by law, be guided by that policy.

Your editorial then advances the proposition that the city is foregoing hundreds of thousands of dollars by retaining open space within the central commercial district. You almost drop the other shoe when you note that Devendorf Park is "hardly ever filled to capacity even on balmy days." Does that mean that we can soon expect to read that we are losing millions of dollars of revenue by not leasing Devendorf Park for Carmel Plaza II? After all, there are some among us who can think of community values only in terms of dollars and cents.

Finally, you opine that the "only real answer" to Carmel's parking problem is "some kind of two level parking facility on the north side of Sunset Center."

I agree that the city is obliged to develop additional parking with the in-lieu parking fees collected to date and I think it is possible that a parking facility at Sunset Center could be designed and constructed so as to meet the esthetic and environmental concerns of the city, but to suppose that such a parking facility could provide "real relief" is ludicrous.

Even if one assumes such a parking facility could provide an additional 200 spaces over and above the amount of parking currently available on the site, it would take at least eight additional facilities of similar capacity and bulk to accommodate the estimated 2,850 vehicles that Carmel's non-resident employees bring into the city each day.

The real reason that Carmel has perhaps the worst parking problem of any community of similar size and the reason that — practically speaking — it cannot be solved in the forseeable future is this: The amount of parking that the City has in the past and currently requires as a condition for commercial development is a fraction of the amount of parking required by other jurisdictions.

To put it in different terms — it is not so much that we do not have sufficient parking to meet the needs of the commercial district, the problem is that we have permitted (even encouraged) commercial development and intensification to reach a level that we cannot possibly provide adequate parking for even the employees, much less the customers.

Perhaps the new General Plan will meet these issues head on. I hope so.

Let voters decide

Dear Editor:

I would like to nominate Royal Adams and her Common Sense group to lead an initiative drive to place the whole Piccadilly issue before the voters, with revised, accurate cost and benefit figures to be compared with those of:

(1) City hook-on tram system coordinated with evening events at Sunset or the movies; and remove cars from Scenic Drive.

(2) Three-level parking facility topped with sunny park level with San Carlos with vines to replace unsightly used car lot, provide modern restrooms and protected access to Sunset lobby for hundreds of people each day, and recreation activities for all ages to be coordinated on the park.

(3) More parking at south end of Sunset, hugging a soundproof gym and sunken pool.

Sunset Center will soon be paid for. Let the motel and hotel room tax help pay for these improvements to life in Carmel if the voters approve of selling the shady, damp $400,000 pocket park which will benefit only a few people a day.

Who says the crime of rape can't happen?

By ROBERT MISKIMON

THE CRIME of rape has received a lot of attention in the national media in recent years. There have been television shows, newspaper and magazine articles, and radio talk shows on the grisly subject.

There has been so much emphasis placed on the crime — what with the women's movement and all — that in many cases the public may have simply stopped paying attention.

It's so much easier and more comforting to think that rape — like murder and hard drug use — is an urban crime, and one of the ills of city life those of us who live on the Monterey Peninsula can thank ourselves we don't have to face.

In that connection, rape is in somewhat the same mental category for many Carmel/Carmel Valley residents as poverty — just another urban blight far away from the serene lives most of us here lead.

However these self-deceptions clearly have their price.

Shirley Fuselier, for instance, no longer has any delusions about the vulnerability of women to rape on the Monterey Peninsula. (An account of the Carmel woman's chilling rape in Pebble Beach appears in this week's paper.)

Mrs. Fuselier, who contacted the Pine Cone/Outlook to tell her story in hopes it would alert other women to the potential dangers they face, is to be commended for her courage and public concern.

Those who read her story can see how easily an intelligent, aware individual can participate in the fantasy that, somehow, everything is all right on the Monterey Peninsula and that normal precautions against crime and violence don't need to be taken here.

The Carmel Police Department recorded three rapes during 1982, while the Monterey County Sheriff's Department reported two rapes in Carmel Valley last year, and none in Pebble Beach. The numbers are small, but the threat is very real.

In fact, the Rape Crisis Center of the Monterey Peninsula reported a total of 200 rapes peninsula-wide in 1982. During the first weeks of 1983, there has been a noticeable increase in the number of reported rapes, according to an agency spokeswoman.

Whether this means there are more rapes being committed, more rapes being reported, or a combination thereof, we aren't sure. But it is clear that the message for the average woman on the street should be to take reasonable precautions against becoming a victim.

As Carmel Police Sgt. Donald Fuselier observed: We can't deter all criminals and rapists from their deviant behavior, but we can limit their access to victims. And that should be everyone's goal throughout 1983.

Yes, it can happen here. It has happened and will continue to happen. Ask Shirley Fuselier.

Panel faces question: how much more Carmel Valley development?

By JOE LIVERNOIS

THE Carmel Valley Master Plan advisory committee must resolve at least a dozen "major issues" in the next three months, committee members were told last week.

Lynne Mounday, environmental planner for the Monterey County Planning Department, told the committee that resolution of the 12 issues could bring the master plan in conformance with an environmental impact report certified by the Monterey County Board of Supervisors last year.

The citizens advisory committee held its second meeting Feb. 3 in St. Dunstan's Episcopal Church on Robinson Canyon Road. Tonight the committee returns to St. Dunstan's to determine how it will bring the master plan into conformity with the EIR.

As a result of a lawsuit filed by the city of Carmel, Monterey County has been ordered to suspend discretionary development in the Valley until the 1980 master plan is revised to reflect concerns in the environmental impact report.

Lombardo, owner of Rancho Canada Golf Club, told the Pine Cone/Outlook last week he would be "happy" with the 2,500 additional residential units in the next 20 years stipulated in the master plan adopted in 1980.

While Mounday said resolution of most of the 12 major issues should not be a "monumental task," it became clear during the meeting last week that the committee must still grapple with two larger issues:

•How much more development can, or should the 30,000 acres of Carmel Valley be asked to house?

•Should the master plan limit development if constraints on services in the area will naturally limit development anyway?

If committee member Nick Lombardo's comments are any indication, developers in Carmel Valley are not particularly heartened by the makeup of the board.

Lombardo, owner of Rancho Canada Golf Club, told the Pine Cone/Outlook last week he would be "happy" with the 2,500 additional residential units in the next 20 years stipulated in the master plan adopted in 1980.

But five of the seven committee members represent what Lombardo and committee member Jack VanZander consider an environmentalist viewpoint. Those five have indicated that a reduction in the 2,500 number is inevitable.

"We essentially want the same things," said Lombardo. "But there seems to be a difference over how we're going to get there."

He said some Carmel Valley residents try to "obstruct growth" in the area with efforts to halt a widened Carmel Valley Road, the impoundment of water and the improvement of sewage services.

As a result, he said, the master plan does not need to stipulate how growth can proceed in the Valley, since the availability of services already will place natural constraints on development.

HE SAID CONSTRAINTS in a master plan could be used as a "roadblock" before other policy decisions are considered by the board of supervisors. "We are not soothsayers," he said.

Member Glen Chang said she could "extend" Lombardo's view of what the Valley could be with available water, more sewage systems and a four-lane Carmel Valley Road.

"I agree with Nick," said Glen Chang. "There is nothing we can't do with this Valley. But it is our responsibility to look ahead. It is our responsibility to say, 'Do we want that kind of growth?'

"We don't alter what we love. We live with it or we move. I realize that is an idealistic and not very realistic view in this Valley. But we have a responsibility to make our best efforts to hold our environment, which is a rural environment."

"The suggestion that people who live in Carmel Valley should be privileged to enjoy the Valley as it is, is not inconsistent with the philosophy that modern day type of facilities should be here," Lombardo said.

"We should not dote on how wonderful we have it," he said. "We have a responsibility to others."

Once the committee decides how extensively the Valley can or should grow in the next 20 years, it must then revise the 12 major issues Mounday mentioned to meet the EIR. They include:

• The six master plan amendments included in the EIR for major projects in the area.

• Designation and location of "service centers" or contractor yards. Mounday said the consensus of Valley residents is that a site for service centers, where service contractors can locate their operations, should be included in the Valley. Mounday said the master plan could include numerous different sites for smaller service centers in the Valley.

• Traffic. The master plan should include provisions for existing roadways, future alignments and improvements, private roads, scenic roadways, bridges, equestrian and pedestrian lanes and the possible widening of Carmel Valley Road to the village.

WATER ALLOCATION and its implications. While the availability of water could be a constraint on development now, proposed water projects such as the Arroyo Seco dam could provide more water to the area in the future, said Mounday.

"You may want to work into the plan ways of meeting the potential changes in the water situation," he said. Present water supplies in the Carmel Valley area allow only about 1,000 additional units.

• Setting 20-year growth in terms of units. Mounday said that with existing lots of record and the 2,500 new units allowed under the 1980 master plan, the total number of units in the Valley in the year 2000 could be 10,400.

He said 6,860 additional units could be built in the next 20 years under the 1980 plan. But a recent wastewater study indicates the Valley could only hold another 4,075 units on septic tanks without serious water contamination problems.

But water supply, with only 1,000 units stipulated in a water allocation priority system approved by the board of supervisors last year, "is the more constraining of the restraints," Mounday said.

• Subdivision evaluation system. The 1980 Carmel Valley Master Plan stipulates that the county should evaluate proposed subdivisions.

But Mounday said the system in the old master plan "has no real system for scoring" proposed subdivisions. He said the evaluation system should be "objective," so that a developer with a proposal can "score" the project and determine what kind of chance he will have of gaining county support for the projects.

• Yearly growth allocations. The board of supervisors has set the limit of growth in Monterey County at 3,600 additional units in the next four years, or 900 per year.

Mounday said growth allocations in Carmel Valley should reflect the county-wide allocation.

Lombardo disagrees with the allocation system. "I can see how it would work in a totally socialistic state (which) encompasses and engulfs entire areas in social planning. In this area, it would be almost impossible," Lombardo said.

BUT NICHOLAS CHIULOS, a planning department staff member, pointed out that the average number of housing units completed in Monterey County in the past five years has been about 500.

The 900 figure was the average rate per year when the American economy was in better condition, Mounday said.

• Areas of Development Concentration. In the 1980 plan, development was concentrated in three specific areas in Carmel Valley, including Mid-Valley, Carmel Valley Village and Lower Carmel Valley.

"But the Village as an ADC is almost shot," said Mounday. He said the wastewater study indicated the Village can handle no more development.

The committee could decide it will replace the Village with another area to meet concentrated development needs, enlarge the other areas of development concentration, or scrap further areas and remove the Village as an ADC to handle a smaller buildout number, Mounday said.

• Carmel Valley wastewater study. The study by consulting engineer James Montgomery indicates the ceiling buildout the Valley can handle by septic tanks without contamination problems to the underground water supply.

Mounday said the committee might wish to "look at package treatment plants" to handle further development.

• Details and designations on the land use map. Mounday said the map "needs more definite direction."

• Possible use of resource contraint areas.

• Policy for reuse or conversion of public or quasi-public facilities, such as schools.

Mounday said the issue arose recently after the Carmel Unified School District shut down schools in the Valley.

After he heard Mounday's report, Don Harrison, committee chairman, told the committee: "These are the dimensions of the problems we face. I'm open to suggestions on how to solve them. At this point, they appear to be a massive pile of complications and confusion."

The committee has been asked by the planning commission to complete its master plan recommendation to the commission within 90 days.

The master plan was certified in 1980 by the board of supervisors after nearly three years of committee work.

MONTEREY COUNTY Superior Court Judge Richard Silver ruled the master plan was inoperative — and declared a moratorium on discretionary building permits in the valley — because the county "abused its discretion" when it certified the master plan without first preparing an environmental impact report. His ruling came in response to a lawsuit filed by the city of Carmel.

The EIR was certified last year and the responsibility of the advisory committee is to "meld" the environmental impact report with the master plan.

Its recommendations will then be referred to the planning commission, with final certification of the master plan to be made by the board of supervisors.

By court order, the moratorium on discretionary building permits will not be lifted until the master plan is certified.

The committee was brought up-to-date by the planning department staff on the progress of development at Carmel Valley Ranch.

It was also told the specific plan for Carmel Valley Ranch adopted by supervisors in 1979 is not a legally binding document.

Several members of the committee asked David Young, planning staff project director, if the committee could recommend a lower density on Carmel Valley Ranch than what has already been provided by the specific plan.

"A specific plan is a detailed land use plan for a small area," Young said. "It is not an

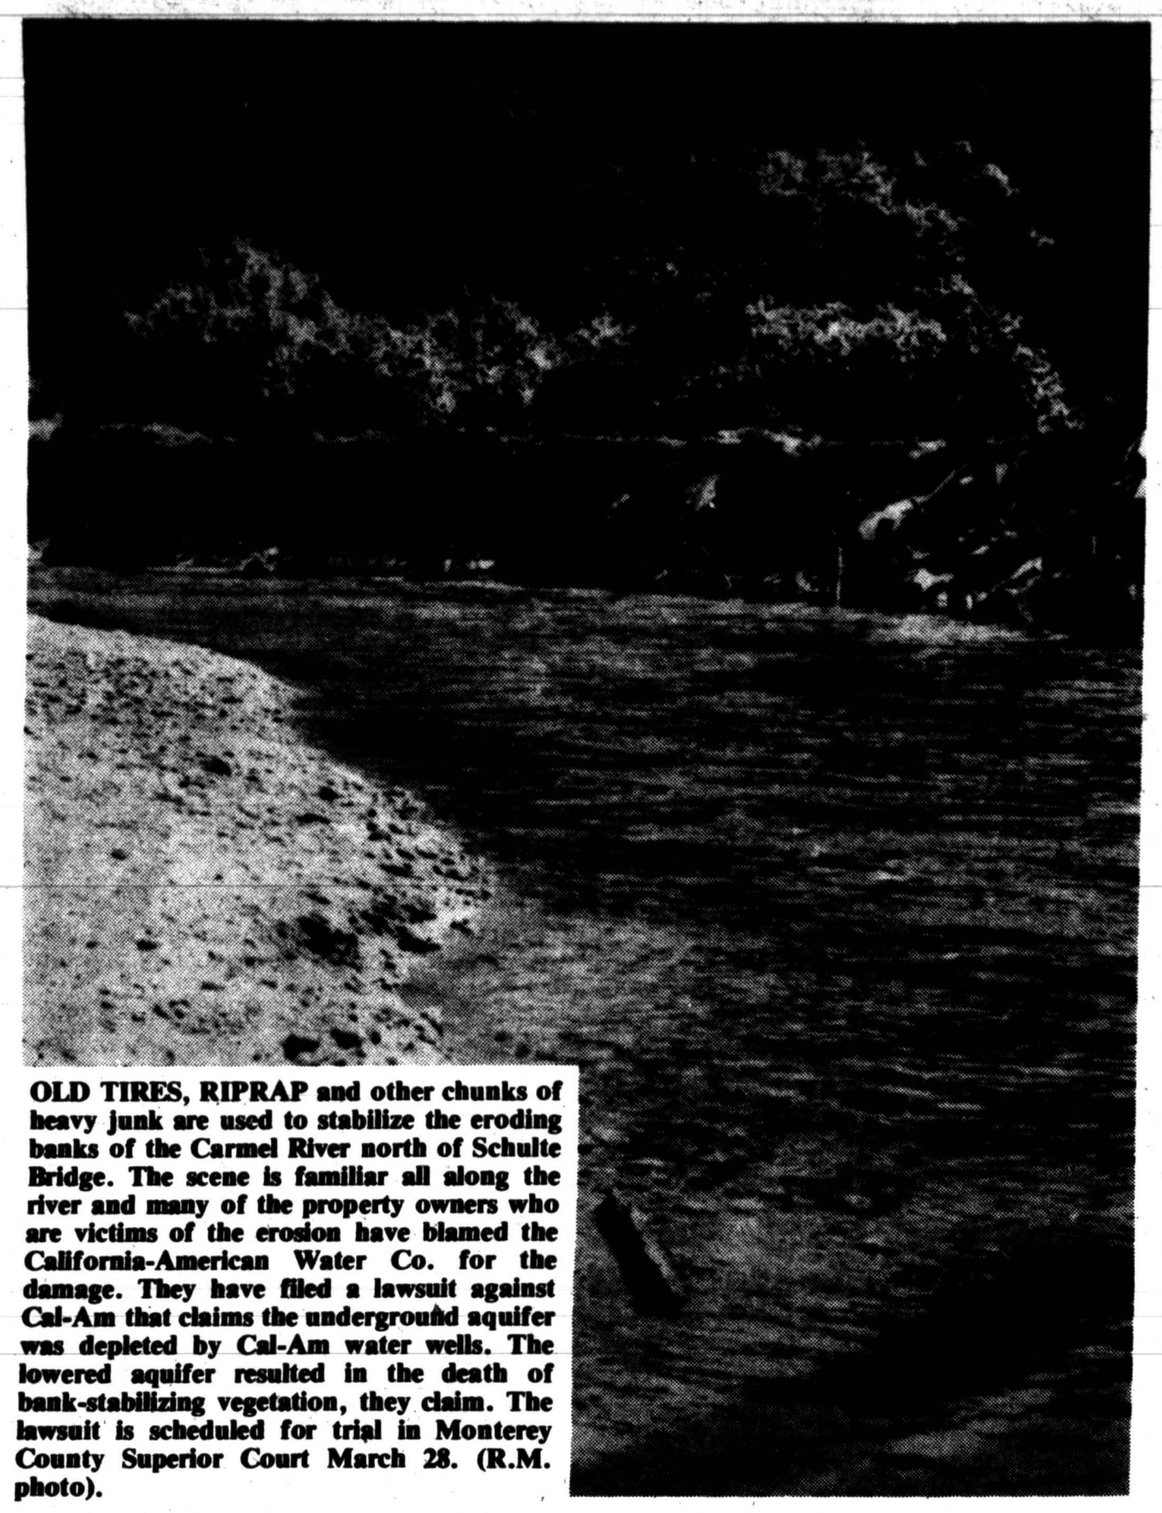
CARMEL VALLEY RANCH (above) and its relationship to the final shape of the Carmel Valley Master Plan is an issue which some members of the citizens' committee charged with revision of that plan would like to explore. Their concerns center on how much of a vested interest the "ranch" has for the full 500 units projected for the entire project in the 1980 master plan. (Joe Livernois photo.)



OLD TIRES, RIPRAP and other chunks of heavy junk are used to stabilize the eroding banks of the Carmel River north of Schulte Bridge. The scene is familiar all along the river and many of the property owners who are victims of the erosion have blamed the California-American Water Co. for the damage. They have filed a lawsuit against Cal-Am that claims the underground aquifer was depleted by Cal-Am water wells. The lowered aquifer resulted in the death of bank-stabilizing vegetation, they claim. The lawsuit is scheduled for trial in Monterey County Superior Court March 28. (R.M. photo).

Lawsuit against Cal-Am postponed for one month

THE LAWSUIT against California-American Water Co. that alleges the company is responsible for damage to property along the Carmel River has been postponed for one month.

The new trial date in Monterey County Superior Court has been set for March 28.

Meanwhile, Superior Court Judge Nat Agliano last month ruled that American Water Works Co. is still party to the suit.

American Water Works, the "parent" company which owns Cal-Am, asked the court to dismiss it from the $2.8 million lawsuit filed by 10 Carmel Valley property owners. American Water Works maintains it is not directly responsible for erosion to property along the Carmel River.

The lawsuit alleges that water pumped by Cal-Am from the Carmel Valley aquifer lowered the water table and led to the death of river bank vegetation. Death of the vegetation accelerated erosion damage to property along the river near Schulte Bridge, the lawsuit asserts.

Agliano's ruling on Jan. 26 means that both Cal-Am and American Water Works could be held "culpable" during the jury trial in March, according to Alexander Henson, the Carmel Valley attorney who will represent the property owners in court.

Henson contends "American Water Works controlled and manipulated Cal-Am for its own selfish purposes" at the expense of his clients. "Cal-Am is only a conduit."

The water company, meanwhile, has hired a new firm to represent it in the lawsuit. The firm of Steefel, Levitt and Weiss of San Francisco was replaced by Popelka, Allard, McCowan and Jones of San Jose. Bernard Allard is the principal attorney for Cal-Am.

The lawsuit was filed in 1980 and Cal-Am filed a cross-complaint in which it seeks to blame the 10 plaintiff property owners — and about 450 other property owners in Carmel Valley — for the death of riparian vegetation.

Cal-Am officials say the water company is not liable for the erosion since it observed all laws and regulations when it was pumping during a drought. Cal-Am claim its actions during the drought were "Socially beneficial, not morally blameworthy."

The plaintiffs against Cal-Am, and the amount of damages they seek, are: Gunnar and Eleanore Reimers, $520,000; Zobel Investments Inc., $320,000; Logar Inc., $620,000; Patrick and Evelyn Parker, $320,000; Bill and Dorothy Dick, $420,000; and Doris Sanderson, $370,000.

Supervisors to ponder appeal on tennis ranch

By JOE LIVERNOIS

THE MONTEREY COUNTY Board of Supervisors is to hear an appeal Feb. 15 from a Carmel Valley couple who believe the neighboring John Gardiner's Tennis Ranch has placed a "commercial squeeze" on their property.

Supervisors will also hear testimony about the controversial transfer of density credits proposal to be included in the Big Sur Local Coastal Program to compensate landowners who lose development rights in prime coastal areas.

The tennis ranch neighbors — Harold and Dorothy Dahl — have appealed a 1981 county zoning administrator decision that Gardiner can add three new tennis courts to his property.

Since then, however, the county placed the appeal on the back burner until a Carmel River floodplain ordinance for the area could be approved. The property on which Gardiner's new tennis courts are planned is located in the floodplain.

He also claims the site of the new courts is in an unlikely location. 'They call it a floodplain,' he said. 'I call it a river bottom.'

Since the floodplain ordinance was approved in December of 1982 by the board, supervisors will now hear the appeal.

The addition of the three tennis courts would bring the total number of courts at the ranch to 14, according to Robert Slimmon, Monterey County zoning administrator.

Harold Dahl said the increased number of tennis courts — and the recently-approved resort lodge — on the property adjacent to his has put a "commercial squeeze" on his property.

While he said the tennis ranch is a "wonderful operation," he said the addition of more tennis courts is unsightly in a residential area.

He also claims the site of the new courts is in an unlikely location. "They call it a floodplain," he said. "I call it a river bottom."

Also on Feb. 15, the board of supervisors will hear testimony on a proposed segment of the Big Sur Local Coastal Program that would allow a transfer of density credit scheme to operate in Big Sur.

The hearing was continued from the board meeting on Jan. 11 because the final proposal had not been completed.

The TDC concept returns to the board of supervisors after lengthy study by the Monterey County Planning Commission. The commission gave the density transfer proposal an "endorsement in concept," according to Commissioner Gary Varga of Carmel Valley.

But the commission would not endorse the specific plan drafted by Fourth District Supervisor Michal Moore and consultant Peter Bass of the Coastal Conservancy.

A transfer of density credit system would assign density credits to parcels within the protected coastal areas of Big Sur. For those properties where little or no development is permitted by the plan, density credits could be sold by land owners to be used elsewhere in areas designated for higher development density.

The system was devised as a way to compensate property owners denied the right to develop their land.

"The legal validity of a TDC program is certainly subject to dispute," according to a planning commission subcommittee report written by Varga.

"Adoption of a Big Sur TDC program is almost certain to invite judicial challenge, (but) the committee endorses inclusion of such a program within the Big Sur Local Coastal Land Use Plan as a tailored mechanism intended to best preserve a public treasure of California."

Only 600 new residential units would be built within the Big Sur Local Coastal Program, which covers the area from Malpaso Creek in the north to the San Luis Obispo County line in the south to Fort Hunter Liggett in the east. The approximately 550 lots of record could also be built upon.

But since the aim of the coastal plan is to preserve the natural splendor of the Big Sur area, few of those building sites will be allowed in "viewshed" areas.

The market value of a building site with a coastal view is substantially more in Big Sur than a building site without a view.

The TDC system, if eventually approved by supervisors and the Coastal Commission, would be designed to compensate landowners for the loss of monetary value which would result from development restrictions.

entitlement."

Young said the county might have a "moral obligation" to ranch developers, but said he believes there is "legally no vesting" in the Carmel Valley Ranch specific plan that could prevent supervisors from halting further development at the ranch.

Mary Ann (Corky) Matthews, committee member, said she believes that if the committee scales down total buildout in the master plan from 2,500, the percentage of units allowed at Carmel Valley Ranch should be scaled back comparably.

But Lombardo countered that "in this instance, there seem to be additional involvements that might make scaling back more difficult." He said Carmel Valley Ranch developers agreed to set aside money to fund improvements at the intersection of Robinson Canyon and Carmel Valley roads based on the "numbers" of units the county would allow in the ranch and subdivision.

"If we scale back Carmel Valley Ranch," he said, "would it be the county, the public, that would have to pick up the greater share of the intersection? That's a rather serious consideration."

Young also noted that the developers also agreed to build sewage treatment facilities based on the project buildout.

Meanwhile, Young said Carmel Valley Ranch has already obtained approval for 252 lots on which to build homes, condominiums and resort facilities.

The specific plan mapped out a golf course and tennis courts, 400 residential units, a 100-unit resort lodge.

It also left open 100 other possible residential units based on planning considerations. It also designated that 1,200 acres be open for public use.

In 1979, the first 140 residential units were approved by the board of supervisors, Young said. Of those, 80 are now built and the rest are under construction.

In November of 1981, a total of 80 more units was approved and in December of 1982, a total of 20 more single-family dwelling lots was approved.

Sanitary district to be updated Feb. 17

DIRECTORS OF the Carmel Sanitary District will hear updates on two of its major projects when it meets at 1:30 p.m. Feb. 17 in Carmel City Hall.

By then, the district is scheduled to have heard from the Environmental Protection Agency on the final phase grant of $8.5 million for its wastewater reclamation project.

It will also have heard from the Monterey County Planning Department on its plans to build an office near Carmel River. An environmental assessment for the site will be reviewed this week by the planning commission.

Critics of the office site maintain the office should not be built on the Carmel River flood plain.

The district has been put on "hold" by the EPA as it awaits third phase funding from the federal agency for the CSD reclamation project. The project would treat wastewater and pipe it to local golf courses for use as irrigation water.

The project is in response to a California Water Resources Board mandate that orders the CSD not to dump its wastewater into Carmel Bay by 1990.

Rape victim calls on women to be prepared to defend themselves

By ROBERT MISKIMON

MONTEREY PENINSULA residents often remind themselves, and each other, how fortunate they feel to live in an area blessed with so many natural and cultural assets.

The "charm" and "quaintness" of Carmel and the "rural character" of Carmel Valley are marketable commodities, as well as frequent topics of discussion among locals.

A sense of well-being and contentment which sometimes borders on euphoria is the reward of those lucky enough to live here. It's almost as if Monterey Peninsula residents have left the stress and strain, poverty and pain of the real world behind.

Shirley Fuselier's false sense of security was shattered for all time at 10:30 p.m., Saturday, Jan. 29 on a dark road in Pebble Beach as she drove home to Carmel from a friend's house near the Beach Club.

"All at once, there was a man sitting in my car with a 10-inch knife," the 38-year-old woman said..

In the next 75 minutes, Mrs. Fuselier was the victim of kidnap, rape, and assault with a deadly weapon. Still shaky last week after her ordeal, Shirley Fuselier feels fortunate to be alive.

"He threatened me with the knife and told me to turn around. We drove for about 10 minutes and ended up in a wooded area somewhere in Pebble Beach."

COMPOSITE DRAWING of the rapist who assaulted Mrs. Shirley Fuselier was released by the Monterey County Sheriff's Department. He is described as in his late 20s or early 30s, with dark blond straight hair, clean-shaven, with a "flat nose." He wore a white or tan jacket, possibly a wind-breaker, with a T-shirt and faded blue jeans. He is about 5 feet 9 inches tall, weighs about 160 pounds, and is of medium build, the sheriff's department said.

Her assailant took the keys out of the ignition and dropped them on the floor; he then ordered Mrs. Fuselier to get out of her car, at which point she ran in an attempt to escape. She lost her footing and slid to the bottom of a six-foot-deep ravine by the side of the road.

"The next thing I knew, he was on top of me," Mrs. Fuselier said. "He took off my pants and tied my hands behind me with my belt. He held the knife at my neck and my ribs the whole time, and kept saying: 'I'd really like to cut you, rich bitch."

After the rape, the assailant took off in one direction and Mrs. Fuselier ran in the opposite direction along the ravine — wearing just a sweater. She had managed to free her hands from the belt.

For 45 minutes, she ran around in the cold and darkness of Pebble Beach in search of help.

"I saw a light and ran toward a house," she said. "I could hear people inside, like they were having a party or something. But the gate was closed and I didn't want to climb over it wearing nothing but a sweater.

"I went to another house and knocked on the door," she recalled. "I met one of the nicest men I've ever met. In a matter of seconds, he had wrapped a robe around me."

SAFELY INSIDE after her ordeal, Mrs. Fuselier notified the Monterey County Sheriff's Department at 11:45 p.m.

For the next hour and one-half, she was questioned by deputies. When her car was found, she drove herself back home to Carmel and notified the Monterey Peninsula Rape Crisis Center, and then drove herself to Community Hospital.

"They gave me a physical and massive doses of ampicillin," she said. "They were through with me at around 5 a.m., and then the sheriff's department worked with me until 6:45 to get a composite drawing. (See accompanying sketch.)

Then Mrs. Fuselier went home to try to explain the incident to her anxious 17-year-old daughter and to deal with her own feelings of hurt and anger.

One of the things that made the assault so hard to accept is the fact that Mrs. Fuselier — by her own estimate — should have known better. She was formerly married to Sgt. Don Fuselier of the Carmel Police Department and knows all the precautions women should take against rape — including not driving at night with car doors unlocked.

In fact, Sergeant Fuselier has worked closely with the Rape Crisis Center for more than a year and has assisted with numerous community education projects.

"I was married to a police officer for five years," Mrs. Fuselier said. "If anyone should know to take precautions, it should have been me."

Sergeant Fuselier and Sue Tasner of the Rape Crisis Center sat in the Pine Cone/ Outlook interview with Mrs. Fuselier in her Carmel home last week. All three said they felt it imperative that the public be alerted to the need for precautions against violent crime.

"There seems to be a false sense of security here," Mrs. Fuselier said. "People think, 'It can't happen to me,' or 'It can't happen here.' Well it happened to me and it happened here."

Ms. Tasner and Sergeant Fuselier agreed that there has been a noticeable increase in all crimes of violence in recent months, including rape. They both stressed that rape is an aggressive, violent crime — not a crime of passion.

"We've seen an alarming increase in the number of reported rapes in the last few months," Ms. Tasner said. "We had 200 rape victims on the peninsula in 1982, and we've already had 16 reported just in January of this year. We figure that only about one out of 10 rapes is reported."

SERGEANT FUSELIER said rape, once classified as a sexual crime, is now regarded as "a crime of dominance and violence."

"The most deadly myth about rape is the feeling that it can't happen to me," Sergeant Fuselier said. "It can, it can.

"There is a tremendous complacency around here. You're no more safe, for example, in your home than you are anywhere else unless you take precautions. We can't stop people from wanting to commit these crimes, but we can limit their access to victims."

As a police officer, former husband and now "best friend" of Shirley, Sergeant Fuselier said he feels a great amount of anger as a result of the rape.

"I'm very angry," he said. "I feel a lot of anger and frustration that there's nothing I can do to make it better for her. The thing that makes rape so bad is that is takes all power away from the victim.

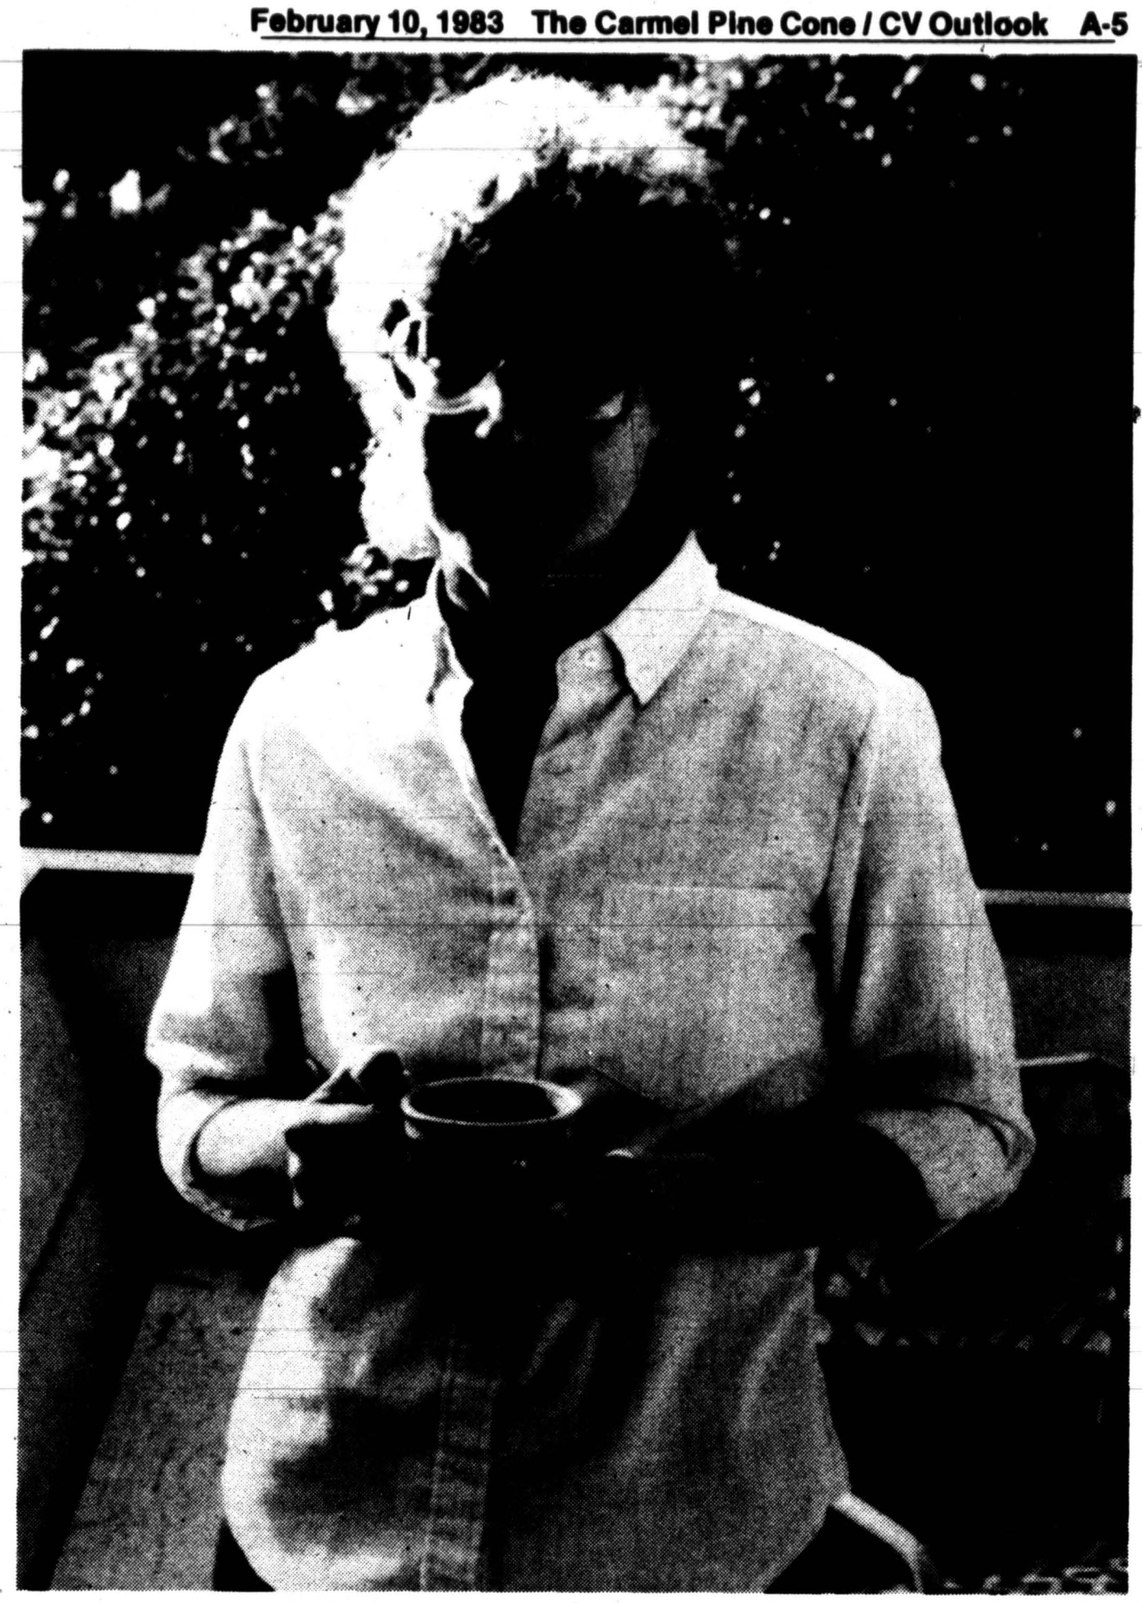
"Rape is closely akin to all crimes of violence, and could become something like murder very easily," Sergeant Fuselier said. "Most rape victims believe they're going to die."

Mrs. Fuselier confirmed those observations.

"I've gone through 48 stages of being shook up in the last four days," she said last week. "If I'd put up any kind of a struggle, I'd be dead now. I keep thinking that if it had been my 17-year-old daughter, she probably would have resisted and might not be alive.

"I've had quite a few nightmares about the knife," she said. "I never thought I was going to die, before that happened. The sex part was so unrelated. The real humiliation was to be running around Pebble Beach for 45 minutes wearing a sweater."

As a result of her experience, Mrs. Fuselier said "at least 100 people" she knows now drive with their car doors locked, who didn't bother to do so before her rape.



SHIRLEY FUSELIER of Carmel — formerly married to a Carmel police officer — thinks she should have known better than to drive around at night with her car doors unlocked. Mrs. Fuselier hopes other women will learn from her experience as a rape victim. (R.M. photo).

Both Ms. Tasner and Sergeant Fuselier said many of the precautions against rape and other violent crimes amount to "common sense" measures which people can take if they just realize they are vulnerable to attack.

They include, for instance, locking car doors, not leaving keys under the door mat, keeping one hand free while carrying packages, and notifying others of your destination and time of arrival if you travel alone.

Howver, there are no clear guidelines for how to handle a rapist once an attack has begun, they advised. Resistance is a good idea in some cases, and not in others, they said.

"It's a judgment call," Sergeant Fuselier said.

THERE ARE SOME basic guidelines which can help reduce the likelihood that one will become the victim of a rapist. These include:

- Replace or re-key locks when you move to a new home or apartment. Install a door viewer and a one-inch deadbolt lock.
- Require strangers who come to your door to show identification. If you have not called for a repairman, do not let one in until you have verified his reason for being there.
- Don't let a stranger into your home to use the telephone. Make the call for them.
- Keep doors locked at all times. Check the back seat of your car before you enter.
- Make sure you have at least a half tank of gas before you drive anywhere.
- If possible, travel on well-lit, busy streets and avoid isolated back roads and short-cuts.
- If you are followed by another car, drive to the nearest open business or to a police or fire station. Women who drive alone should not stop to assist a stranger.
- If you have car trouble, raise the hood, turn on the emergency lights, lock your door and remain in the vehicle. Don't accept a ride from a stranger..

'I was married to a police officer for five years,' Mrs. Fuselier said. 'If anyone should know to take precautions, it should have been me.'

Mrs. Fuselier said she hopes other women in the Carmel/Carmel Valley area will be alerted to the fact they are potential rape victims — just as they would be in any urban area — as a result of her experiences.

And she hopes they will take steps to reduce the chance they, too, will become victims.

City, business group to explore communication

By MICHAEL GARDNER

THE BUSINESS community should not be expected to control the proliferation of tourist-oriented shops downtown, the Carmel Business Association believes.

The CBA and the city council will gather in a special meeting at 4 p.m. today (Feb. 10) at city hall to discuss mutual problems and ways to improve cooperation between the two groups.

A tentative agenda developed by the CBA in a special meeting Monday, Feb. 7 indicated some of the concerns expressed by the business organization.

The topics include council expectations from the CBA, what the business organization can do to promote healthier relations between the community and itself, and why the council believes the CBA should be responsible for the number of tourist-oriented shops in Carmel.

'We hear from the council that the business community 'is ruining the city.' Our position is that is the last thing the businesses want to do since you would destroy the uniqueness of Carmel.'

The latter topic is expected to be discussed in depth.

Council members have said in the past they believe the CBA should take a more active role in attempts to halt the proliferation of tourist-oriented businesses.

But it is the responsibility of the council and planning commission to adopt strict measures in conjunction with landlords to stop the tourist-oriented business invasion, the Carmel Business Association Board of Directors decided this week.

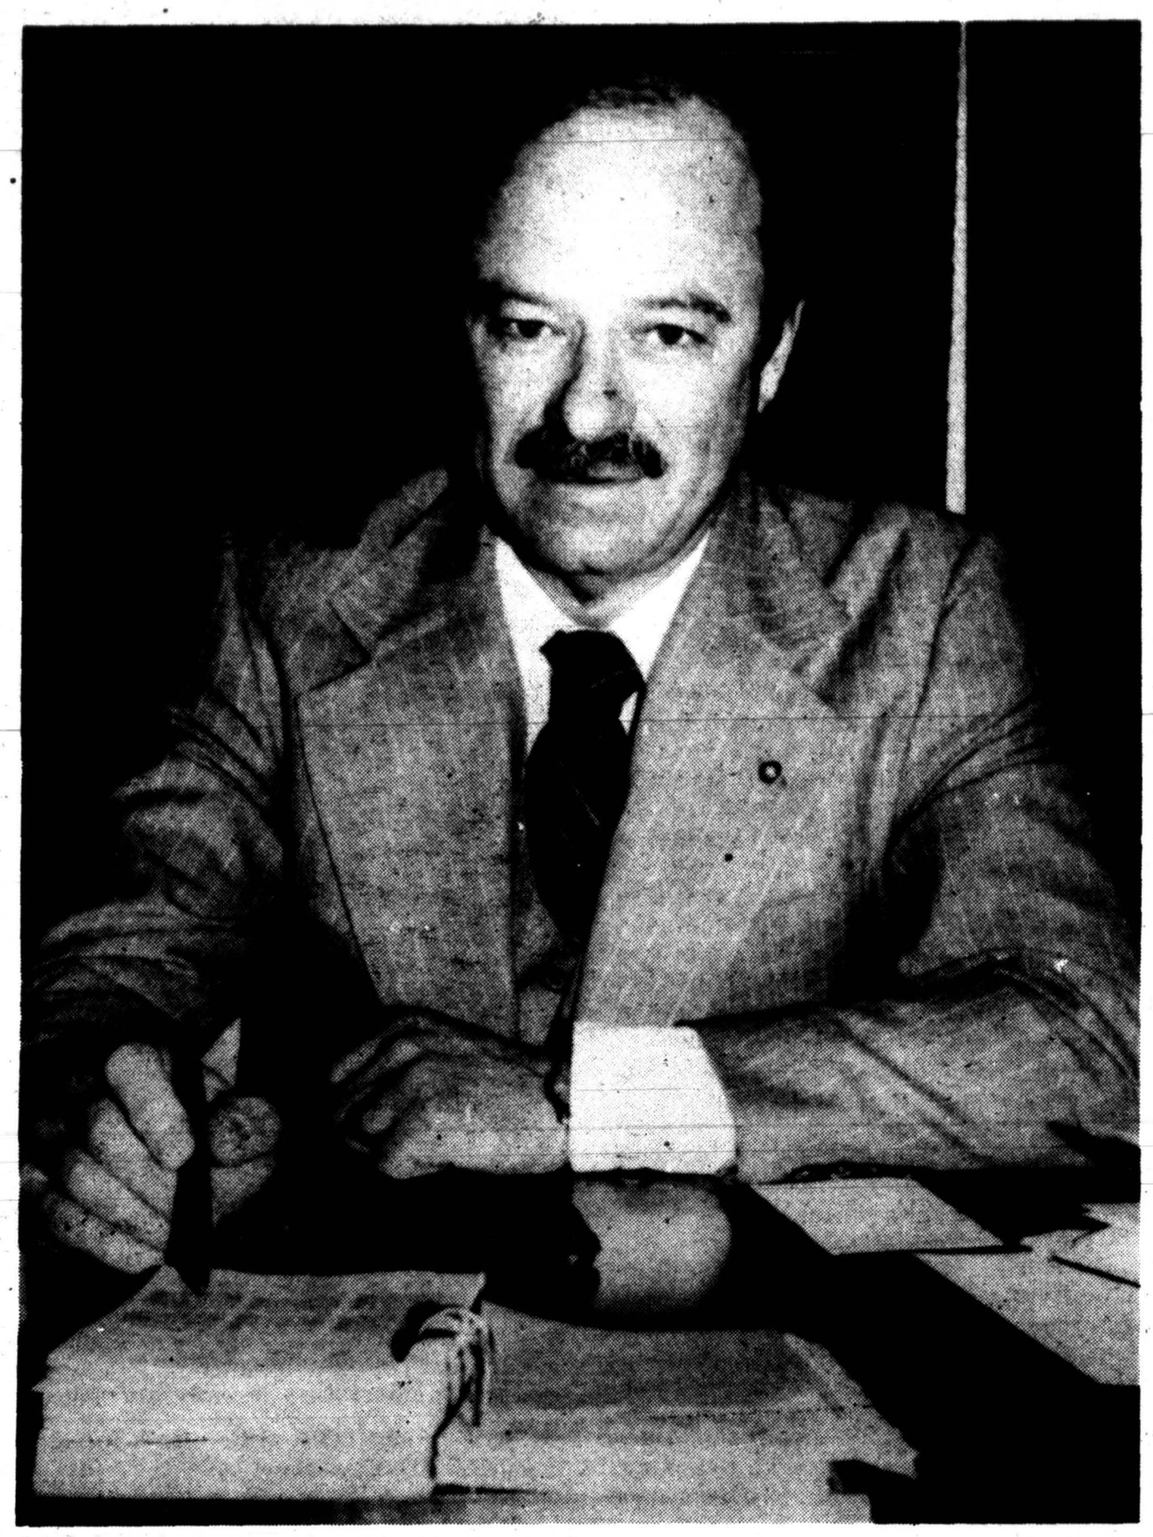
"The CBA believes that it can't prevent tourist-oriented businesses," President George Greenwood told the Pine Cone/-Outlook Feb. 7. "We searched our conscience and we can't find any way that we can do that legally.

"We hear from the council that the business community 'is ruining the city.' Our position is that is the last thing the businesses want to do since you would destroy the uniqueness of Carmel.

"You would not only ruin it for the citizens, but for your business too. It would be like killing the goose that laid the golden egg."

Greenwood has written a letter to the council that reiterates the CBA position that the city should control tourist-oriented businesses and not rely on "self-regulation."

"I ask you to consider the proposition that the present condition of the village has in no way been brought about by the 'business community," but rather by past city councils and planning commissions. Those bodies set the character of the community, and allowed it to change for better or for worse," Greenwood wrote.



GEORGE GREENWOOD, president of the Carmel Business Association, believes a majority of the merchants want to maintain the "quaint charm" of the village. The CBA and the city council will meet at 4 p.m. today (Feb. 7) to discuss issues of mutual concern. (M.G. photo.)

MAYOR CHARLOTTE Townsend said the letter reflects "a friendly attempt" to open lines of communication between the CBA and the council.

However, the statements that the council and planning commission are to blame for the proliferation of tourist-oriented businesses are out of line, the mayor said.

"I took a little exception to that. I don't think that's entirely true," she told the Pine Cone/Outlook Feb. 7. "I don't think you can put the blame on any one side or the other.

"If you had truly responsible business people in every respect, we would not have the problems we have now."

The business community and the city should stop blaming each other for the problems, the mayor said. Instead, the two groups should work together for solutions to those problems, Mrs. Townsend believes.

"There is far too much blame. I wish we could start focusing on our mutual goals instead of blaming each other," the mayor added.

The CBA can help promote resident-oriented businesses, she said.

"They are business people who communicate a lot with other businesses," she said. "They know of desirable businesses and could help attract them to Carmel."

The meeting is not designed to solve all of the problems, Greenwood wrote in his letter to the council.

"In no way do we believe that all of the problems of Carmel will, or can be, solved in this meeting; we visualize this as a 'beginning of the beginning,' of a process of evolving a mutual understanding of the problems facing Carmel, and developing, in as much as possible, a common rational approach to solving, or at least constraining these problems," Greenwood wrote.

"It is absolutely necessary that you realize that the business community is not a monolith with one mind or one purpose," Greenwood wrote.

"We (they) are individuals. There may be a few who are ambivalent or selfish as to the future of Carmel-by-the-Sea, but they are the minority, and they stand alone," he continued.

"My experience indicates that the majority of business persons, at least those represented by the Carmel Business Association, appreciate this community and are dedicated to its preservation," he wrote.

"Surely if Carmel is destroyed as a quaint, lovely, desirable place, the result would be a tragedy to the people who live here, and would be quite detrimental to businesses located here — so we have, at the very least, this in common.

'If you had truly responsible business people in every respect, we would not have the problems we have now.

"Is there a way this place can be preserved for those who live here, while still sharing it rationally on a part-time basis with those who long to visit it, and to partake, if only briefly, of its wonder?

"This is the question that must be resolved, and I think it can best be resolved through cooperation, through the type of communication represented by this meeting of the business community and your good selves."

The city is in a "quandary" because it wants to maintain its uniqueness and charm, but it is the village charm that draws tourists to Carmel, Greenwood wrote in his letter.

"The quandary which we face is that the more we endeavor to preserve the character of Carmel-by-the-Sea, the more desirable it will become as a place for all of these people to visit over the weekend or on a day off.

"These are forces we cannot change, no matter how we try. Whatever we do to become more remote (quaint), will only increase our attractiveness to tourists," the letter continued.

Greenwod stressed that the CBA members will avoid any confrontation with the council at the Feb. 10 session.

"I have reminded the members of our board to be the most mannerly and to maintain a gentle decorum when stating their opinions in this meeting for open conflict and animosity will avail us nothing," Greenwood added.

Book covers spread word about health in schools

HEALTH INFORMATION is only a phone call — and book cover — away for many Carmel-area students.

The Community Hospital of the Monterey Peninsula Auxiliary has donated more than 5,000 book covers to Carmel area schools.

But the covers do more than protect books — they list the titles of some 200 Tel-Med health information cassette tapes which the students can hear privately to learn about a wide variety of health-related topics.

All the students have to do is choose a topic from the book cover and the corresponding number, such as 942-Alcoholism: The Scope of the Problems.

The student calls the Tel-Med number (624-1999) and asks for the tape number. The tape is then played over the phone. All calls are anonymous. The service is available from 9 a.m. to 8:30 p.m. daily.

Book covers were distributed free by the auxiliary to schools throughout the Monterey Peninsula. In this area, book covers were distributed to Carmel High School, Carmel Middle School, All Saints, Episcopal Day School and Robert Louis Stevenson School.

Tel-Med chairman Phil Gray of Carmel Highlands conceived and organized the book cover idea.

The three-to seven-minute-long tapes are not designed as substitutes for doctors, Gray said.

Tapes deal with scores of health-related topics of special interest to teenagers plus topics of general interest. There are categories on skin and dental care, smoking, drugs, alcohol, venereal diseases, pregnancy and birth control, Gray said.

"Children and teenagers are no different from adults when it comes to wanting information about their health and growth processes," he said.

"But for them, sometimes getting answers is more difficult, either due to shyness or lack of resources. These tapes provide easy access to basic, authoritative medical information. All anyone needs to do is call the Tel-Med number, ask for the tape they want and listen."

The hospital auxiliary has offered the Tel-Med service for about four years. During that time, there have been more than 125,000 requests for tapes at a rate of about 55 per day, Gray added.

During the first eight months of 1982, more than 12,000 calls were received. Of those, 7,500 were from women, 3,300 were from men and 1,400 were from young people, Gray said.

The most often-requested tapes are on the subjects of marijuana, Herpes Type II (venereal disease), masturbation and homosexuality, Gray said.

Other frequent tapes requested cover such topics as blood pressure, birth control, bowel disorders, common aches and pains, and drugs.

Students may obtain the book covers in the school office.

TEL-MED book covers that list health tapes available for listening at a special Community Hospital of the Monterey Peninsula telephone number were recently distributed to Carmel High School students. Freeway opponents to meet Feb. 14

OPPONENTS of efforts to build a freeway through Hatton Canyon will hold a "pep rally" Feb. 14 in the Carmel Middle School.

The meeting is scheduled to organize testimony in favor of the recent announcement by the California Transportation Commission that it will consider rescission of the Hatton Canyon freeway.

The commission — which establishes project priorities for administration by the state Department of Transportation — is to meet in Sunset Center Feb. 24 and 25 for a pubic hearing on its planned rescision.

"This is the whole ball of wax," said Michael Kelly, chairman of the Save Hatton Canyon Committee. He said the meeting Monday will be "a big pep rally."

Carmel starts to clean up after battering by storms

CLEANUP EFFORTS are underway after a series of major storms and high tides lashed Carmel the past couple of weeks, but city officials say it will be weeks before long-term repairs will begin.

High tides over the weekend of Jan. 29-30 battered Carmel Beach. The tides destroyed an access stairway at the foot of Scenic Road near 10th Avenue and damaged several others.

City Forester Greg D'Ambrosio said Feb. 7 that his forestry department crews were out in full force to mop up after the latest storm.

But D'Ambrosio does not believe permanent repairs on the heavily damaged Carmel Beach access stairways can be done until after the winter rainy season.

"There's some sort of damage to all of the stairways," he said. "After this series of storms is over, we'll have to regroup and figure out what we're going to do."

The city council has allocated about $100,000 for a beach erosion control program. However, the bulk of those funds are already earmarked to rebuild an access stairway that was destroyed by high tides two years ago.

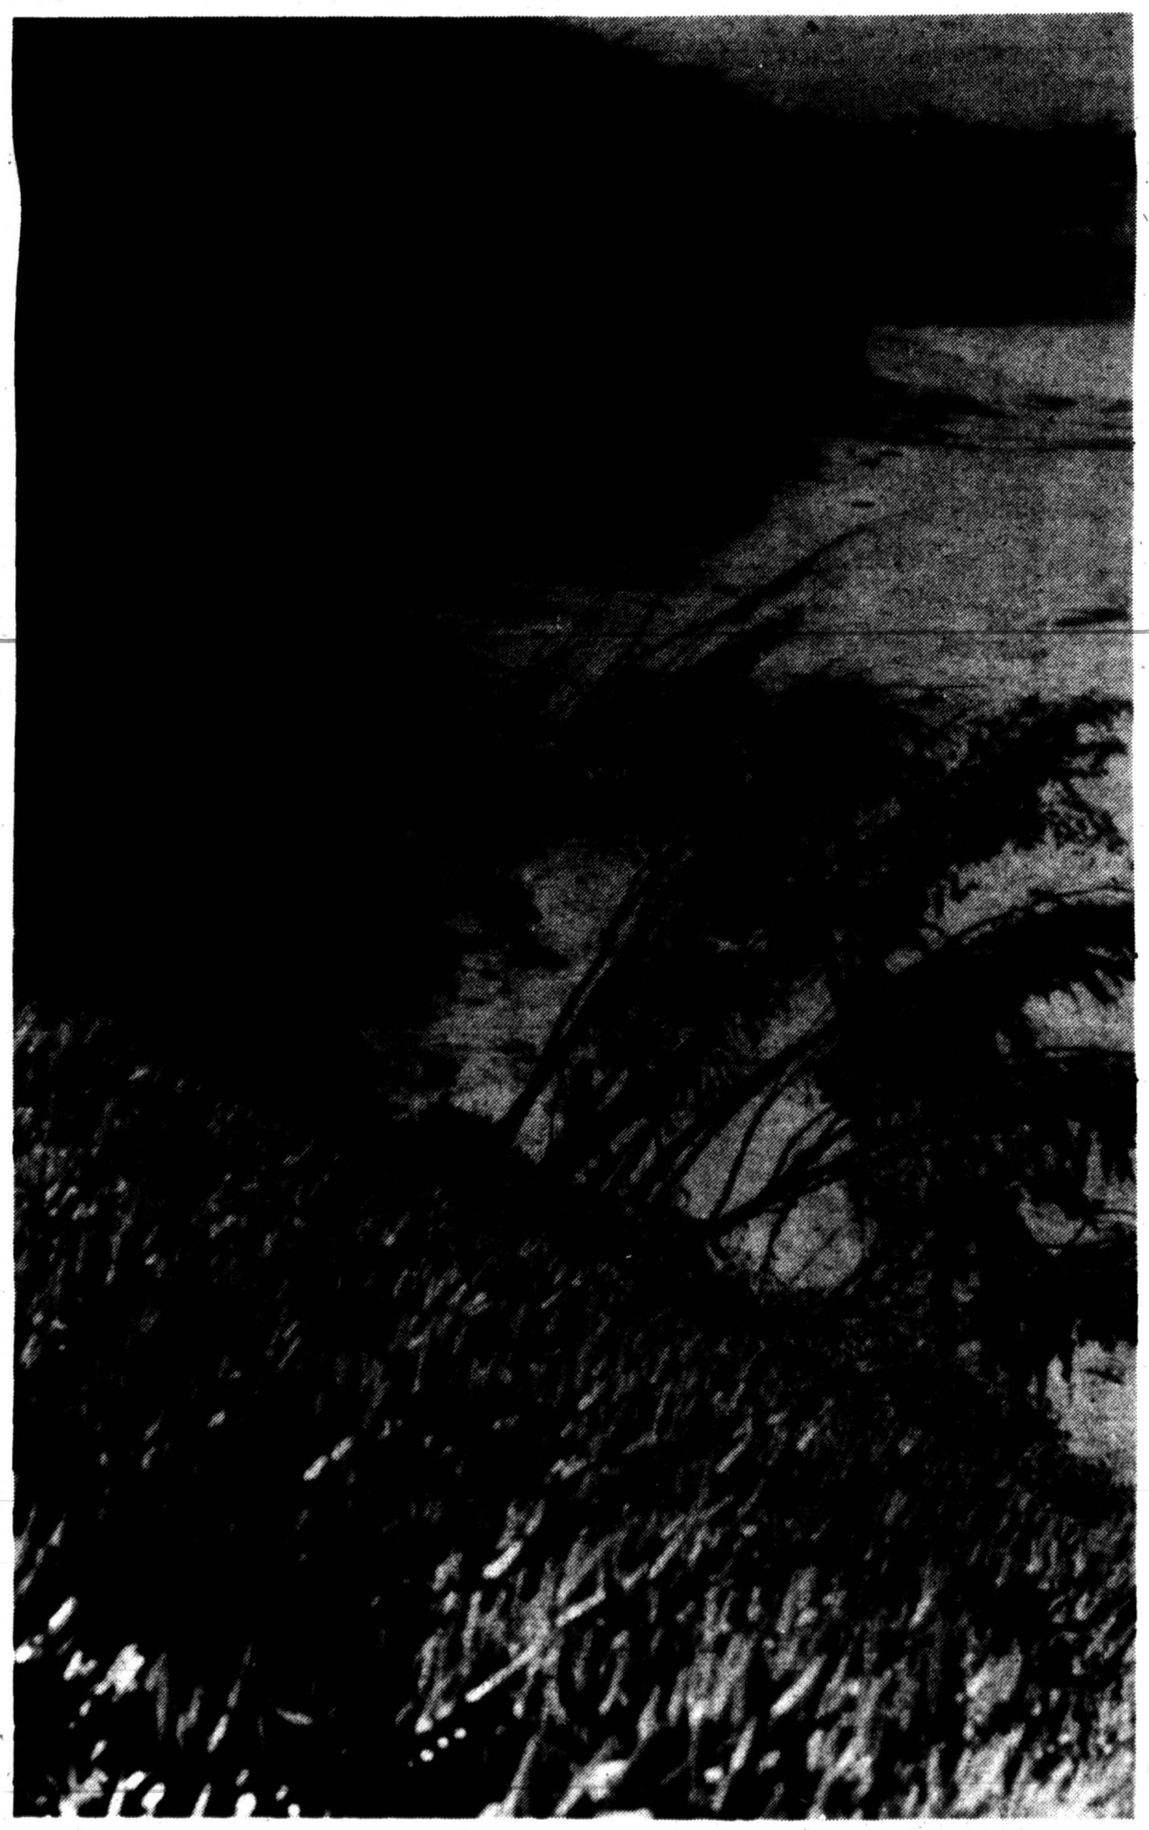
Work on that project is scheduled to be completed in early spring. Both stairways are at the foot of Scenic Road near 10th Avenue.

Carmel Public Works Supt. William Askew reported "no major problems at this point."

"We're just on our regular duty this week. No overtime. The overtime came last weekend (Jan. 30-31)," Askew said.

'There's some sort of damage to all of the stairways,' he said. 'After this series of storms is over, we'll have to regroup and figure out what we're going to do.'

Public works department crews were out on Carmel Beach Monday (Feb. 7) to fill in some drainage holes in back of the sea walls as a measure to slow erosion, Askew said.



TWO YEARS ago a major storm demolished this stairway (upper left) and the city has finally adopted a plan to rebuild the access point. However, a recent storm demolished access stairway to the south of the already-damaged stairway and it too will have to be repaired. (Lee Brooks photo.)

A PEACEFUL sunset hid the wrath of a furious storm in late January that wreaked havoc along the Carmel Beach and destroyed an access stairway. Carmel received a brief break from the rains Feb. 3-4 before another storm hit the area over the weekend. (Lee Brooks photo.)

Traffic accidents down on Carmel Valley Road

By JOE LIVERNOIS

TRAFFIC ACCIDENTS on Carmel Valley Road have decreased steadily since 1968, according to the California Highway Patrol.

Though Sgt. Michael Byrne said the CHP "doesn't really know why," average daily traffic and the numbers of traffic accidents have decreased on the road.

Nevertheless, he told about 150 members of the Carmel Valley Property Owners Association last week that "there's a heck of a lot of conflict on that road."

Byrne joined four others who spoke of problems along Carmel Valley Road at the annual CVPOA membership meeting Feb. 2 in Del Mesa Carmel.

Other speakers included CHP Captain Jim Munson, Monterey County Sheriff's Lt. Robert Crisan, Carmel Valley Fire Chief Bob Heald and Monterey County Public Works Department Civil Engineer Mo Orrett.

Byrne told the crowd that the Highway Patrol responded to 131 collisions in 1982, compared to 144 auto accidents in 1968.

The numbers of injuries in accidents were also less, he said. In 1978, the Highway Patrol counted 74 injuries attributed to automobile accidents, compared to 49 in 1982.

But fatalities on Carmel Valley Road increased from three in 1981 to four in 1982, he said. Each of the fatal accidents had a different cause.

The lower accident and injury rates are probably due to a marked decrease in average daily traffic, Byrne said. Latest traffic figures indicate that average daily traffic on Carmel Valley Road in 1978 was 9,000 cars, as opposed to 7,500 in 1981.

But Byrne said the CHP "really doesn't know 100 percent why" traffic has decreased on the road.

Despite the good news, traffic problems still exist on Carmel Valley Road, he said. Two factors figure predominantly in his reasoning:

- The numbers of intersections, driveways and private roads that feed into Carmel Valley Road. Byrne said the cross-traffic caused by 27 intersections, 108 driveways and 44 private roads creates "a heck of a lot of conflict" on Carmel Valley Road.
- Slow drivers vs. fast drivers. Byrne said the character of the Valley creates two distinct slow-vs.-fast conflicts. First, older drivers dodder along the road in a valiant but slow attempt to navigate the windy road without crashing into the mountains while younger drivers frantically await the first white-knuckled opportunity to pass.

SECOND, SIGHTSEERS and gawkers brake their way down Carmel Valley Road while the day-to-day commuter zooms to and from work spinning the radio dial with one hand and applying make-up with the other.

Slow drivers are indeed a problem on Carmel Valley Road, Byrne said, though they are not often involved in collisions.

"The slow drivers force others to lose their mind," Byrne said. "Otherwise responsible people simply lose their sanity and end up doing things they shouldn't do."

Byrne also told the CVPOA, "You do have a problem with the drinking driver" on Carmel Valley Road.

"It's hard enough driving on a straight road when you've been drinking, much less driving on a road as curvy as Carmel Valley Road," Byrne said.

Captain Munson said state laws that increase prosecution of drunk drivers helped to lower the number of drunk driving arrests when the laws went into effect early last year. At the time, publicity that accompanied the drunk driving laws kept a lot of drunks off the roads, he said.

The effects of the publicity are beginning to wear down, however, and Munson said the local Highway Patrol office has noticed that officers have arrested more drunk drivers in the past several months.

So has the sheriff's office, Crisan said. He said the large numbers of arrested drunk drivers have strained the already overcrowded conditions at the county jail.

But Munson said that increased prosecution of drunk drivers, stiffer fines and continued publicity will eventually cut down on drunk drivers and deaths caused by drunk drivers.

The lower accident and injury rates are probably due to a marked decrease in average daily traffic, Byrne said. Latest traffic figures indicate that average daily traffic on Carmel Valley Road in 1978 was 9,000 cars, as opposed to 7,500 in 1981.

Munson said the CHP hopes to foster a "public attitude that drinking drivers are bad people."

Most of the questions asked by the CVPOA crowd were directed to Monterey County Public Works Supervising Engineer Mo Orrett.

Orrett was asked why the department does not re-mark the stripes along the road to prohibit passing, "for safety's sake."

Orrett said it is not the county's responsibility to play "Big Brother" on the road. "We don't tell people where it's safe to pass," he said. The passing stripes on Carmel Valley Road are "California standard," he said.

ORRETT ALSO SAID the speed limit on Carmel Valley Road will probably not be lowered from its predominantly 55 mile-per-hour posted speed.

Munson of the Highway Patrol told the group that "there does not seem to be a speed problem" on Carmel Valley Road. "It's mostly a right-of-way problem."

Orrett also announced that the California Transportation Commission has set a public hearing on plans to rescind the adopted Hatton Canyon Freeway route for 10 a.m. Feb. 25 in Sunset Center.

When asked whether the planned rescission was a "foregone conclusion," he answered that "nothing is a foregone conclusion."

He also said the county was awarded a $575,000 contract to improve the surface and shoulder on Carmel Valley Road between Valley Green Drive and Carmelo School.

He also said he expects improvements to the intersection at Robinson Canyon and Carmel Valley roads to begin in April. He said the county will wait for California-American Water Co. to decide where it will locate its aqueduct in that area.

Crisan of the sheriff's department was asked to participate in the CVPOA meeting to discuss "crime problems" along the road.

But Crisan told the group "there is no great, great crime problem along Carmel Valley Road because of the strategic situation of the valley."

He said smart criminals don't bother to take their dirty work to Carmel Valley because "there is no way to escape."

By the time a crime is reported, the sheriff's department can have units at all four exits from the valley within minutes. He said he vaguely remembers one bank robbery attempt in the Valley that ended when the robber tried to beat a hasty escape through traffic at the Carmel Valley Road intersection at Highway 1.

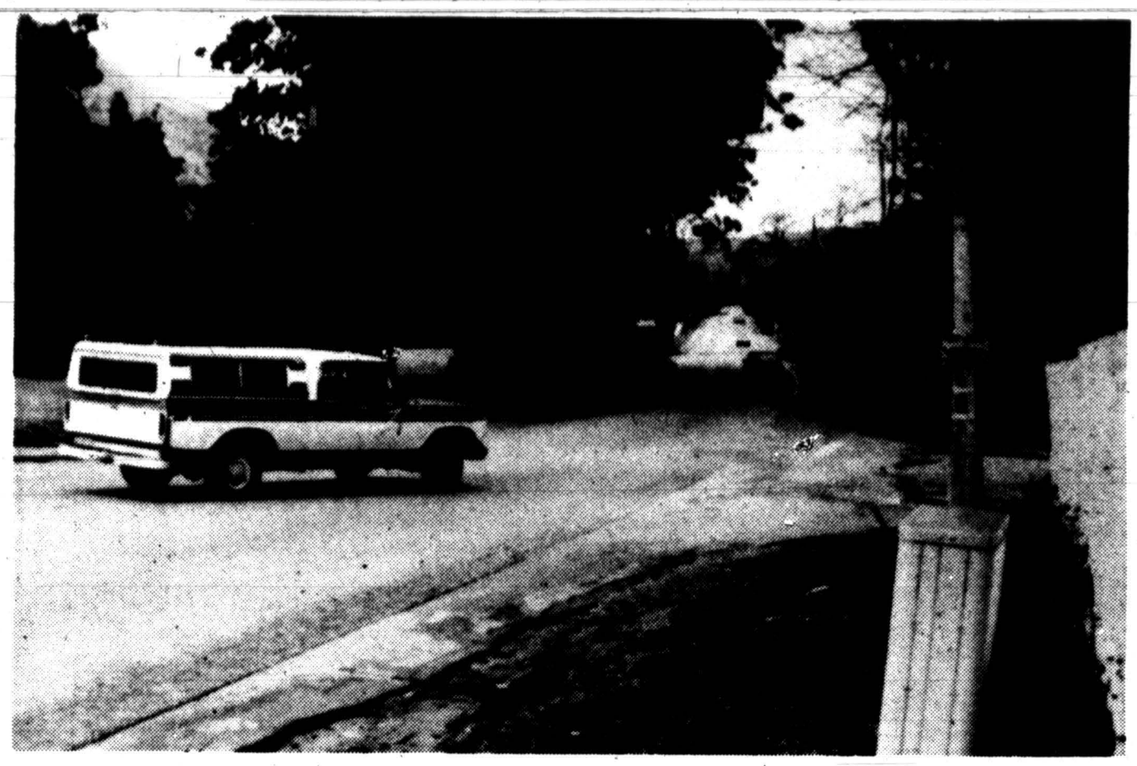
"That's one of the advantages of living in this area," he said.

Problems criminals might have when they try to leave Carmel Valley Road in a hurry are the same problems residents could have in case of an emergency.

Byrne and Munson acknowledged that "escape from the area would be very difficult." Byrne said a highway or freeway through Hatton Canyon "would speed up departure time."

And Munson said the CHP has developed a tentative emergency plan, though the plan mostly covers emergencies caused by flooding.

Any other emergency, such as fire, is almost impossible to deal with, he said, "because there would not be enough time or manpower to coordinate" emergency evacuations.



THE EXCESSIVE AMOUNT of driveways and crossroads, such as the intersection of Carmel Valley and Boronda roads (above), creates one of the major traffic problems on Carmel Valley Road, according to a California Highway Patrol spokesman who spoke at the Carmel Valley Property Owners Association meeting Feb. 2. Despite the right-of-way "conflicts" on the road, traffic accidents have decreased on Carmel Valley Road since 1968. Concurrently, average daily traffic on Carmel Valley Road has dropped from 9,000 to 7,500 in the past several years. (Photo by Joe Livernois).

CV Ranch annexation faces board

THE MONTEREY PENINSULA Water Management District will consider the annexation of a portion of Carmel Valley Ranch property to the California-American Water Co. Feb. 14.

The district board of directors is expected to vote on the annexation after it hears a report from its demand management committee.

The committee last month agreed the annexation should be authorized despite testimony from several Carmel Valley residents that approval of the specific plan for Carmel Valley Ranch stipulated the ranch developers should first develop a water system from the so-called Tularcitos aquifer before it tied into the Cal-Am system.

Critics argue the ranch has never seriously sought to prove the existence of the underground water source.

But Carmel Valley Ranch developers and the demand management committee argue that the specific plan was a document approved by the Monterey County Board of Supervisors.

Committee members said it is not the responsibility of the water management committee to make land use decisions. If the county wants to reallocate water to developments outside the Cal-Am area, it is the business of the county to do so — according to Nancy McClintock, district chairwoman — not the business of the water district.

She said the district allocated water from the Cal-Am service area to the county last year and the county decided to reallocate a portion of that — approximately 40 ac. ft. — to a 30-acre section of Carmel Valley Ranch land outside the Cal-Am service area. An acre foot is 325,851 gallons of water.

Ranch developers plan to build a 100-unit resort lodge on the property.

Bruce Buel, water district general manager, said the district allocates water to "jurisdictions responsible for land use decisions. It is not our philosophy to get involved in land use policy."

Actually, the board can only recommend whether or not an area ought to be annexed to the state Public Utilities Commission. But Buel said the PUC usually accepts the recommendation of the board.

The board will also decide whether to set a new date for the Carmel River Management Program protest hearing.

Buel will recommend the board set March 7 for the hearing.

The protest hearing has been postponed once already, Buel said, because the district staff has had "technical difficulties" in drawing up the boundaries for the management program.

The district meets at 7:30 p.m. Monday in the Monterey City Council Chambers.

Tryouts for the Pony (ages 13-14) and Colt (15-16) Leagues will be held at a later date to be announced.

For more information, call Patty Cox at 624-8956 or Jerry Pullen at 625-1091.

Planning commission may drop machinery proposal

A plan to ban machinery in downtown Carmel will probable be scuttled by the planning commission.

The land use committee of the commission has recommended that the proposal by City Atty. George Brehmer be dropped, Planning Director Robert Griggs told the Pine Cone/Outlook last week.

The proposal may be considered again when the commission begins its review of the proposed revisions in the general plan, which is scheduled for March, Griggs added.

Brehmer had recommended that the city consider prohibition of certain kinds of machinery downtown because of a potential "carnival atmosphere."

The land use committee recommendation is scheduled to be considered by the full commission when it meets at 4 p.m. Feb. 16 at city hall.

Judge gives blessings to CV synagogue plans

By JOE LIVERNOIS

WITH A BLESSING from Monterey County Superior Court, members of Congregation Beth Israel will develop plans for a synagogue in Carmel Valley.

Judge Robert O'Farrell determined Jan. 28 that the 5,000 sq. ft. synagogue would have little effect on the population density or building intensity of Carmel Valley.

A moratorium on discretionary building permits has been in effect in Carmel Valley since 1979 and will continue until the Carmel Valley Master Plan is revised and readopted.

But in November, Rabbi Mark Gross asked Monterey County Superior Court for an exception to the court-ordered moratorium. The rabbi asserted the synagogue would increase neither population density building intensity in the area.

The congregation intends to build the synagogue on about 2.75 acres of Quentel's Evergreen Farm roughly two miles east of Highway 1.

With the court ruling under its belt, the congregation must now develop a tentative design for the synagogue to submit to the Monterey County Planning Department. A use permit is still needed from Monterey County.

For the past six years, the 170-household congregation has met for services at the former Oak Grove School on First Street and Park Avenue in Monterey.

Before that, the membership met for about 20 years in various churches around the Monterey Peninsula. "It was a wonderful interfaith experience," Rabbi Gross said, but it didn't meet the needs of the growing congregation.

When the 50-year old Oak Grove School building was purchased in 1976 for use as a synagogue, the congregation knocked out walls to three classrooms for the worship room.

The old school building "is not ideal, either space-wise or stylistically," Rabbi Gross said. Membership has grown considerably in the past three years and the congregation bought the Quentel property last year.

"We had a pride of having our own home when we bought the Oak Grove School," Rabbi Gross said. "Now we can have a pride of a home building we constructed ourselves."

While plans for the synagogue have not yet been drawn, he said the membership would prefer a building that "makes use of the space we have wisely and well" rather than a spacious, energy-wasting temple.

He said the congregation is "shopping right now for an architect" and, if all goes as scheduled, groundbreaking ceremonies could be held by the end of the summer.

The application for a synagogue was opposed by the city of Carmel. City Atty. George Brehmer said the city opposes any exception to the moratorium and he pointed out the "county must still exercise its discretion" when it considers the use permit application for the synagogue.

CARMEL MAYOR Charlotte Townsend and Harrison Memorial Library Trustee Francis Herrick exchange woeful sentiments Monday afternoon when the city council and the library board met in City Hall. The city council was invited to the library board workshop as the board discussed its funding dilemma after Monterey County offered the city a meager 4½-year contract. Herrick said the city council was invited to the workshop in an effort to avoid possible "friction" if the library board asks the city for money to make up what it will not receive from the county. (Michael Gardner photograph .)

Library board ponders 'usual county blackmail'

By JOE LIVERNOIS

THE CITY OF CARMEL may grin and bear what Mayor Charlotte Townsend calls "usual county blackmail" and accept a meager five-year county contract for library funding.

Mayor Townsend and the Carmel City Council met with the Harrison Memorial Library Board of Trustees Feb. 7 in Carmel City Hall to hear of budget woes the library board faces.

The mayor and the council did not particularly like what they heard.

If the library board signs a four-year contract the county offered last month, it will accept substantially less money from the county than it has in past years.

About half the patrons of the Carmel library live outside city limits, yet the county next year will only pay the city $85,000 to provide library services to county residents. The library budget next year is expected to be about $440,000.

On the other hand, if the library does not accept the county contract it will lose all its county funding, as well as its participation in the Monterey Bay Area Cooperative Library System (MOBAC).

And the contract stipulates the city library forfeits the benefits of the contract if it charges a user's fee or cuts services to county residents.

"It's the usual county blackmail," said Mayor Townsend. "For years the county has blackmailed the city of Carmel."

She said she believes the county looks at Carmel as an "effete" community with more money than it knows what to do with.

Councilwoman Helen Arnold agreed that the library situation "looks to me like a grim picture."

But Councilman David Maradei said he realizes the "county is strapped for funds." He also said he believes the city should support the library to the fullest — even if it must support county patrons.

"Personally, I think the library is one of the two or three valuable assets we can't do without," Maradei said. "I don't think the library board will deny library service to anyone."

This year, the city contributes about $290,000 to its city library.

IF THE LIBRARY board signs the county contract, the library will have to come up with another $40,000 next year if services are to remain constant.

Peg Richter, library director, said that even if the county contract is not accepted and the library budget is cut by $102,000, the library will still have to come up with another $50,000 because it will lose its county money and $27,000 from the state.

The special meeting Monday was called by the library board so the city council will "understand" the dilemma the board faces.

The library board meets again Feb. 22 and is expected to decide whether or not it will accept the county contract.

If it does, the city must be prepared to fund the difference or accept considerable reduction in services.

Cuts can still be made, according to board treasurer Walter Gorey. "We can see economies that will allow us to provide full services with an additional $40,000 from the city," he said.

"Do we have the money we're asking for?" asked Councilman Robert Stephenson.

"Yes and no," said James Bajari, city finance director. "If you're talking about what we have in our present revenue flow, the answer is no. If you're talking about whether we can alter other debts, like capital expenditures, the answer is yes."

He said the city can also dip into its allocated and unallocated reserves to fund the library shortfall.

Earlier in the month, Mayor Townsend and board director Patricia Faul said they worried about the prospect of city taxpayers

'Personally, I think the library is one of the two or three valuable assets we can't do without,' Maradei said. 'I don't think the library board will deny library service to anyone.'

"subsidizing" library patrons from outside city limits.

"The taxpayers of Carmel include a lot of tourists who pay a lot of sales tax," said Trustee Jean Grace. "We are talking about city money from taxpayers in Carmel who may be from New York."

Ms. Faul agreed Monday. "I'm not too worried about having to pay a tremendous amount for library services," she said.

"Carmel receives more money per capita from tourists than any other city in California. If we are beating our breasts about the Carmel taxpayers ... we are not that bad off. This will not be a hardship on the Carmel taxpayers."

'CARMEL RESIDENTS are not beating their breasts," said Mayor Townsend. "We've always subsidized the library more than we should be expected to. What we object to is the high-handedness of the county. The county regards us as an effete monied little town."

Meanwhile, Al Eisner, who recently moved to Carmel from Carmel Valley, said library trustees should consider using money from an endowment fund to cover the shortfall.

Ms. Richter said the library board now has about $700,000 in its endowment fund. But the current board policy states money from that fund will be used to finance construction of the planned library annex across the street from the existing library. She said the policy could be changed.

"The board has a very real discretion on how that money can be used," said board chairman Francis Herrick.

Eisner suggested the endowment "could be used rather than making taxpayers of Carmel foot the bill."

The meeting ended without action by either the trustees or council members. But the goal of the meeting was clearly met.

Library trustees agreed that any action they take on the county contract is their own responsibility. But they said they want the council to be aware of the ramifications.

Herrick said the meeting was called to avoid possible "friction" between the library board and the city council.

"The way things are arranged, there is the possibility of friction (between) the city and the library board," he said.

"Any decision the library board makes will be difficult and probably will be unfavorable, especially in terms of finances. But it's a decision the library board must make. We don't want to pass on the responsibility (to the city council)."

Carmel River Watch asks help with willow project

Members of the Carmel River Watch have asked for help among their neighbors as they coordinate a project to plant willow trees along the Carmel River.

CREW President Darby Worth said she will ask local service organizations and schools for assistance in the willow-planting project.

Mrs. Worth announced the project at the monthly CREW meeting Feb. 3 in the First Baptist Church on Schulte Road.

"We would like this to be a community effort," she said. "We need desperately for everyone to pitch in and help."

She said the willow-planting project could reduce erosion along the Carmel River and would protect property.

"Whether or not a person in the Valley is losing their property to erosion, everyone in the Valley who drinks water contributes to the problem," she said. "It's a man-made problem, not a natural problem."

She and others in the Valley contend that the excessive pumping of the Carmel River aquifer has resulted in the death of river bank vegetation which, when healthy, stabilizes the river bank.

Willow trees grow quickly and thrive in damp soil, she said.

Ms. Worth teaches an ecology course at Tularcitos Elementary School. She said pupils at the school would help root the willows but the help of community organizations would be needed to assist in the planting.

She said the willows would be available for property owners with erosion problems in April or May.

CREW is an environmental organization composed of Carmel River property owners who advocate responsible management of the river.

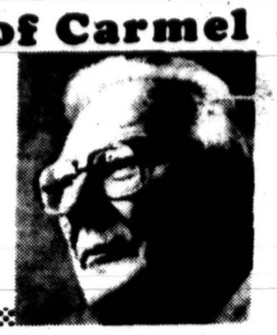
The Conscience of Carmel

Freeway hearing to be Feb. 24-25



By GUNNAR NORBERG

WHEN I FIRST came to Carmel for what turned out to be a lifetime stay, I remember the silent ecstasy I felt when I approached the Carpenter Street intersection of Highway 1.

On the right was a tree-topped bluff above the roadway, and on the left a tree-grown declivity which was the head of the Hatton Canyon.

The year was 1940, and the month was August. In the bower formed by the bluff on the right and the lightly forested canyon on the left, I paused at the side of the road to enjoy the beautiful vista.

Today — as in all the years since 1957 when the county board of supervisors first casually accepted the proposal by the State Highway Commission to build a monster freeway down the steeply sloping Hatton Canyon — the freeway threat still hangs over that forested canyon.

But now, for the first time, there is the prospect that the threat could be permanently removed. The California Transportation Commission has had in mind for a full year "rescinding the Hatton Canyon freeway adoption on Route 1 berween 0.2-mile south of the Carmel River and 0.4-mile south of the Route 68 separation."

In more straightforward language, that simply means to stop thinking for good about construction of huge interchanges at both ends of the Hatton Canyon — the first at Carpenter Street, and the second at Carmel Valley Road — and then, after making enormous cuts-and fills, lining the sylvan canyon with freeway concrete.

In a 10-page detailed background report, dated Feb. 9, 1982, filed then with the California Transportation Commission, John West, deputy project director of the state transportation department, reached these conclusions:

"It has been 26 years since the Hatton Canyon routing was adopted. Construction was not programmed then and is still not programmed.

"There is no need for a high capacity facility as envisioned by the adopted routing. There is no planned freeway development to the south and most traffic is of a local nature destined for Carmel and development along Carmel Valley road.

"The existing corridor," which means the existing Highway 1 between Carpenter Street and Rio Road, "offers potentially affordable improvement alternatives, including the 'no-project' alternative. It is time to consider rescinding the adoption," which means the Hatton Canyon desecration, "and to start rethinking local development and transportation planning on the basis of living with the existing highway corridor."

The California Transportation Commission — which holds its various monthly meetings in different parts of the state — has scheduled its February meeting here in Carmel. It plans to hold various hearings at Carpenter Hall in the Sunset Center on Feb. 24 and 25. But the hearing on whether or not to terminate further consideration of a freeway in the Hatton Canyon is scheduled only for the morning of Feb. 25. (Later word on details of this hearing, and the other hearings, will no doubt become available close to the actually hearing dates.)

In the long background report prepared by Deputy Project Director West, there is much reference to the possible widening of existing Highway 1 to a full six lanes between the Carpenter Street intersection and the one at Rio Road, to make it easier for the next 10 years or so, to move more and more traffic more rapidly.

BUT THE THOUGHT of moving more cars along Highway 1 opposite Carmel can only lead to more cluttered over-development at the already imperiled mouth of Carmel Valley.

And now, despite a court-ordered moratorium, county officials have continued to authorize more new construction at that Carmel Valley entrance where the danger of massive flooding is an ever-present winter-spring threat.

Any traffic improvement in the Carpenter Street-Rio road segment should not foolishly open the door wide to more hazardous over-commercialization of the Carmel Valley mouth, but should instead limit itself solely to the possible lessening of some serious and ascertained accident hazard.

The only portion of Highway 1 opposite Carmel where there is such a documented excessive accident hazard is the part from Ocean Avenue to Rio Road, where the West background report says the accident rate is "about 50 percent higher than the state-wide average."

While the present projected cost of a Hatton Canyon freeway is more than $17 million, the cost to simply widen Highway 1 between Ocean Avenue and Rio Road from two lanes to four lanes, and to make some recommended adjustments at the Ocean Avenue intersection, would carry a far more modest pricetag of about $1 million. And such a widening would be expected to have a substantial effect in reduction of the high accident ratio on the Ocean Avenue-Rio Road segment without providing too significant and unfortunate encouragement to more perilous over-development.

At various times during the past quarter-century, there have been many citizen groups firmly opposed to the plan to put any kind of freeway through the wooded Hatton Canyon, which have sent long petitions to state officials to support their stand. Today there is also such a citizen group — the Save Hatton Canyon Committee.

It is headed by Michael Kelly, who has been in South America the past two months engaged in an ornithological research project in the Galapagos Islands off Ecuador, but whose return is imminent. In charge of the committee efforts during Kelly's absence is Dr. David Wardlow, who has scheduled the next meeting of the Save Hatton Canyon Committee for 7 p.m. Monday, Feb. 14, in the library of the Carmel Middle School. He invites anyone interested in the committee efforts to attend and participate. The committee already has collected more than 2,000 signatures on petitions opposed to use of the Hatton Canyon for freeway construction.

While I was mayor — on July 27, 1978 — the Carmel City Council unanimously passed a resolution addressed to the state legislature to approve legislation ordering that "no additional freeways, expressways, or other high-speed roads be constructed in the city's environs." This proposed prohibition was of course intended to apply to a possible Hatton Canyon freeway, but the prohibition was never legislated, and today, unhappily, the Carmel City Council has expressed its approval of such a freeway.

It is therefore now most important for those opposed to a Hatton Canyon freeway to make themselves heard at that California Transportation Commission hearing at Sunset Center's Carpenter Hall during the Feb. 24-25 session.

Local banks in the news

By FLORENCE MASON

TWO LOCAL financial institutions are in the news today because of their community activities.

MERCHANTS OF THE MONTH

Merchants and artists in Carmel have an opportunity to display their wares in a rather unexpected place.

It's the lobby of Great Western Savings and Loan on San Carlos Street at Seventh Avenue.

Manager Gary Duffel explained that the purpose is not only to give the merchants and artists more exposure, but also to "create lobby interest for our customers to enjoy while they are here."

Each month there is a table just inside the doors on which a local merchant displays his wares. "We turn the area over to the merchant and let him arrange his display," Duffel explained.

No prices are shown and the display must be scheduled through the bank. January "Merchant of the Month" was Variations of Carmel. This month Hansel and Gretel has a colorful and tantalizing display of some of its candy in a Valentine motif.

Village Artistry has been one of the first art galleries to display some of its offerings on the walls of the Great Western lobby. Carl Jones, a photographic restorer, also displayed some of his work. These spaces, like the Merchant of the Month table, must be reserved in advance through Duffel.

The Great Western manager has been on the job in this office since last October. Before that he was with Northern California Savings and Loan for about six years. He joined Great Western and moved from Northern California's Carmel Rancho office to this one when the two associations merged.

LET'S HEAR IT FOR FITNESS

The cause of fitness has been taken up in a very welcome and practical way by Wells Fargo Bank. Locally, the bank awarded grants to Tularcitos School for a jogging course, a fitness course and a walking course designed for seniors.

Grants, each in the amount of $2,500, equal about one-third of the total funding needed for each course. At Tularcitos, the program was greatly aided also by a donation of $30,000 in memory of former Carmel Valley resident Sylvia Schwartz.

The Wells Fargo program started two years ago as a project for seniors. Responses, which inundated the bank were attributed primarily to Prop. 13 and other cuts in funds usually available to schools and parks. Throughout last year, Wells Fargo contributed to the establishment of 400 courses in California.

Sports promotion director Diane Miller in the bank's San Francisco headquarters said Wells Fargo expects to help start another 300 or 400 courses this year. "One of the reasons for the big response from schools is that the students aren't passing the state's new performance test. The need for more emphasis on physical fitness has become obvious," she explained.

In addition to the funds, Wells Fargo also provides a promotional kit with information on how to use the courses.

"We're starting in a new field this year," Ms. Miller added. "Hospitals are picking up on the idea of wellness programs for their patients and also for their employees. We're now getting requests for grants from them." She said that Wells Fargo's program has become the largest privately funded fitness program in California.

There are three other courses on the peninsula that were aided by this program — one at Santa Catalina School and seniors' courses at Monterey Peninsula College and at Scholze Park in new Monterey.

A fourth type of course for which funds are also available through Wells Fargo is "Free-Wheeling," a course for handicapped persons in wheel chairs. Applications for grants are available from the Wells Fargo Gamefield Grant Committee at 2088 Union St., Suite 1, San Francisco, Calif.

ANOTHER COMMUNITY ENTERPRISE

There are several new things to report about The Community Store, that unique showcase for merchandise made by or for non-profit organizations.

There is now a project director who is in the American Tin Cannery store "all the time." She is Dana Calhoon, a long-time peninsula resident who has been actively involved in many of the non-profit agencies which participate in The Community Store.

Also, in line with its goal to help the participating agencies and organizations with a series of special events and by featuring special merchandise, the store now features Japanese folk crafts. There was an invitational preview Feb. 4 and there will be demonstrations of the crafts at the store from 2 p.m. to 4 p.m. Thursday, Feb. 24.

The "Japanese Social Cultural Project" is presented by The Community Store and the YWCA. Women who have learned folk crafts will show their work, which will be sold in the store on the mezzanine floor of the Tin Cannery on Ocean View Boulevard in Pacific Grove.

The store, which opened last September, was started by Willis W. and Ethel M. Clark Foundation to enable non-profit agencies, school and church groups to raise fund directly year-round. These groups bring merchandise into the store to be sold, the money is returned directly to the organization and a percentage is retained for operating costs. In its first four months of operation, The Community Store returned more than $3,500 to agencies and organizations.

What can you find there? Gift items, hand-made silver jewelry, ceramic figures, color photographs, antique furniture and collectibles.

The Community Store is open seven days a week. Among the organizations contributing to its operation are the Sunrise Rotary Club, the Pacific Grove Kiwanis Club and the Monterey Peninsula Jaycees, as well as a number of individuals.

Among the organizations which have contributed merchandise are the Carmel Foundation and the Carmel Crafts Guild. Kip Hudson is chairman of the store's advisory committee.

HERE COME THE COLKERS

The Coachman's Inn is now a family enterprise. New owners Mr. and Mrs. Jeffrey Colker and his parents — Mr. and Mrs. Alvin Colker — plan to continue the inn much as it has been under owner Bill Sefton and manager Margaret Raine.

Mrs. Raine will assist the Colkers during the transition, but plans to retire when that has been accomplished. The Colkers have employed a couple to serve as live-in managers.

The inn, located on San Carlos Street between Seventh and Eighth avenues, is listed as having 29 units. Carmel Planning Director Bob Griggs explained that this is a legal non-conforming use, since the inn was in operation when city ordinances which limit the number of motel and hotel units were passed. "You couldn't build that many units now, if it were new," he said.

The Jeffrey Colkers, who live in the Carmel Valley Golf and Country Club area, have two daughters, Lindsay, 5, and Jayne, 3. Those two girls have kept Mrs. Colker busy at home for the past few years after she had spent eight years as a school teacher in southern California. But now she, as well as her husband, will be "staying involved" in the Coachman's Inn. Alvin and Irene Colker live in Agoura, Calif., and will come up to this area periodically.

Jeffrey Colker is an account executive in Merrill Lynch's Carmel office, and will continue in that role.

Andrea Colker appeared before the Business License and Code Review Board to request, and obtain, a new busines license. "I'm ready to get out into the business world!" she told the board, while she absorbed the details of the city license process.

One of the matters discussed with Mrs. Colker at that meeting of the BLCRB was new state requirements for smoke detectors. Fire Marshal Vern Allred said there are additional conditions that must be met this year, even though hostelries like the Coachman's Inn already have detectors in each room.

Allred said after the meeting that the fire department anticipates some further requirements that the Carmel City Council may wish to add, to address some specific safety concerns for Carmel. He said members of his department met with motel and hotel owners last year to go over these new requirements, and that City Atty. George Brehmer will draft the local specifications.

IT'S A MATTER OF PRIDE

A King City resident who is the last in a 150-year line of jewelers is the owner of one of the newest businesses at The Crossroads.

Arthur Hesselbein is the only son in a family of jewelers. He left his home in Cologne, Germany to spend "one or two years seeing the new world." He is still here and likes the life so much that he finally closed the family store in Cologne two years ago and has now opened Hesselbein's Jewelers and Gemologists at 202 Crossroads Blvd.

A man with a great deal of pride in craftsmanship, Hesselbein said that the store "goes heavily on service. We encourage people to bring their things in to be repaired, including watches."

The creative side of his business is the design and manufacture of quality jewelry. And the third side of the triangle — along with quality and craftsmanship — Hesselbein said, is reasonable prices. "That's the old European way!" he added.

Hesselbein has lived in King City 15 years. "I have a manufacturing facility there and I have done work for people on the peninsula for many years," he said.

Why did he decide to open a store at The Crossroads? "It's the most attractive shopping center I've ever seen. My customers — including some from Los Angeles, San Francisco and even the East Coast — haven't a single complaint about it. They, and we, appreciate its charm and openness."

Hesselbein and his wife, Gisele, have a daughter, Wendy, who is at King City High School. When he's not in King City or Carmel or with his family, he may be out on the golf course at Corral de Tierra.

Hesselbein is in the Carmel store three days each week. The other days, manager Brad Johnson is in charge. Johnson knows what it means to be involved in a family business too; his father has a jewelry store in Solvang and is a friend of Arthur Hesselbein. That's how it happened that Johnson moved to this area and into the new jewelry store. He is living in Pebble Beach and when time permits, he is on the ski slopes.

over by Elisabeth Mark and Irmtraud Barth. They came from the same home town in Germany — Wiesbaden — but did not know each other until they met on the peninsula.

Elisabeth Mark and her husband, photographer Woody Mark, came to this area in 1973, when Mark retired from a career in the motion picture business and discovered the pleasures of still photography. Some of his photographs of the area will be offered at The Petit Bazaar, which should be open by the time this report is in print.

Mrs. Barth worked for the Petit Bazaar's former owner, Carmel Ajan, for about three years. And where is Mrs. Ajan going? She and her husband are on their way to Memphis where Ajan, who used to be associated with Quail Lodge, has a position with the famous Peabody Hotel.

Mrs. Mark and Mrs. Barth plan to continue the Petit Bazaar much as it has been. Their emphasis will be on "useful" gifts, mostly for the household, Mrs. Mark said.

She spent many years in the savings and loan industry, in positions with Monterey Savings and First Federal, before she moved into the retail field. Then she worked three years at the Sweater Corner in Carmel, which convinced her she liked the retail field and wanted to get into it on her own.

CARAVAN TO MAZAR

The news about Caravan to Mazar is that the Carmel Valley Village shop plans to move into Carmel.

Owner Mohammad Nasir believes he now has "one of the best weavers in the country."

"He's an artist," Nasir said of Mohammad Ali Sardar. "He's been weaving since he was seven years old in Afghanistan." Ali Sardar came to this country two months ago. He can repair even the most delicate of antique rugs, Nasir said. To celebrate his new allegiance, he is making a three-by five-foot rug that will feature an American flag woven into the center. Yes, he plans to stay here.

Caravan to Mazar has been in its Village Center location, behind Will's Fargo restaurant, since last fall. If all goes well, the business will relocate to Carmel around March 1. Nasir is considering a location on Mission Street where he will continue to display his specialty, Dutch colonial antique furniture, as well as Oriental rugs, jewelry, tribal clothing and hand woven textiles.

NOTED

Richard Scudder, who recently became the owner of Extraordinary Things (formerly Adams Too), now offers an interior design service through his shop, which is on Fifth Avenue near Junipero Street. He also has a new partner — Linda Hugger — who is a designer out of San Francisco and Saratoga.

Ron Rieser of Pebble Beach has a new role with Monterey Savings and Loan: he has been appointed loan consultant for the branch on Alvarado Street in Monterey. Rieser began his career with Monterey Savings as a loan officer and vice president in 1977. He will now be assisting customers to process loans for single-family residential properties.

John F. Toale of Carmel has been elected president of Morgan Petroleum Securities Inc. in Monterey. He moves up from his position as executive vice president of that company and will continue as vice president of Morgan Petroleum Inc. He will be responsible for management of Morgan Petroleum limited partnerships.

A French chateau will arise where Hacienda Hay and Feed was located in Carmel Valley. The hay and feed company has moved near the Mid-Valley Shopping Center and the chateau will be the home of the new Chateau Julien winery.

The winery is owned by Robert and Patricia Brower. They expect to have their first wine crush in September and to move into the new building before the end of the year. It was designed and will be built by Carmel architect and contractor Michael Grant.

LATE FLASH! A long-awaited event is about to occur: Katy's Place is opening.

Katherine Curry, owner of the new restaurant on Mission Street near Sixth Avenue, told me that she hopes to open the doors of Katy's Place for this coming weekend. That's not a guarantee, but if all goes well admirers of her Wagon Wheel in Carmel Valley can have the same good foods right here in Carmel "from 7 a.m. on into the afternoon." There are some new plans, too. Details soon, in this column.

JACK HOLT, a 27-year veteran of the Monterey Post Office, has been appointed new postmaster for the Carmel area. Holt will assume his duties Feb. 19.

Jack Holt to become postmaster Feb. 19

FOR THE first time in 27 years, Jack Holt will not report to work at the Monterey Post Office Feb. 19.

Instead, Holt will assume his new duties as postmaster for the Carmel area post offices.

Holt, whose appointment was announced Feb. 3, replaces former Carmel Postmaster Frank Ledesma, who retired last October.

Holt will oversee operations at the Carmel-by-the-Sea Station on Fifth Avenue and the Carmel Main Post Office at the mouth of Carmel Valley.

A resident of the Monterey Peninsula for 41 years, Holt understands the "uniqueness and character" of Carmel.

"I'm very aware that Carmel is a unique city. I'm looking forward to it. I have a great deal of respect for Carmel and its citizens," he said. "I think we have to be sensitive to the uniqueness of the area and providing the best service we can to serve that uniqueness."

The announcement of his appointment is the culmination of a career-long goal for the 52-year-old Holt.

"You set a goal in life when you start with the postal service that someday you want to be a postmaster," he explained. "It was a goal and Carmel will provide a unique and interesting opportunity."

Holt joined the postal service in Monterey 27 years ago as a substitute letter carrier and clerk.

In 1960 he was promoted to foreman of mails, followed by an appointment as assistant superintendent of mails. For the past eight years he has served as manager of customer services.

Holt is married to peninsula artist Shirley Holt. The couple makes their home in Pacific Grove. They have four children: Jack, an employee of the Pebble Beach Co.; Robert Scott, a metal sculptor in Monterey; Shirleen, an employee of the Pine Cone/Outlook; and Kelly, a Pacific Grove High School student.

Crosby leaves locals reeling

By TERRI LEE ROBBE

SUNSHINE — rain — celebrities — parties — it was enough to leave numerous locals reeling from an overdose of a good thing — and it did. As always and in spite of the rain, it was a week to remember and the social activities were definitely up to par.

Nathaniel Crosby, who follows in his dad's golfing shoes, held his star-studded bash at the Beach and Tennis Club and the following night the famous Paisano (stag only please) was held at the Elks Club in Monterey.

There were also Crosby dinner-dances at the Beach Club on Friday and Saturday evening and, of course, Kathryn Crosby held her annual "wrap-up" gala. She also attended the Time magazine cocktail party and spent a good portion of the evening autographing copies of her recently released book My Life With Bing.

Chuck and Wendy Lazer held their annual Crosby party as did Dr. Robert and Dee Robertson and Frank and Marian Fee. Mrs. Taher Obaid invited a small group of friends to luncheon and Maggie Eastwood, whose planned houseguests, Jimmy and Patti Connors, had to cancel their visit, decided against having her annual party. Along with her children Kyle and Alison and her boyfriend, Henry Wynberg, Maggie got in a bit of exercise by walking the greens.

Many locals who usually have parties decided to skip the whole affair and leave town for a few days — including Don and Mary-May Altenberg, who caught the rays in Palm Springs.

Although the rain put a damper on things both Saturday and Sunday, the first two days of the tourney featured sunshine and a full force of celebrities.

Spotting Glen Campbell was an easy job as he was dressed in bright red and was quickly tagged "Santa Claus." Good natured Glen is always a favorite with the crowd as he loves to clown and isn't bashful about posing for photographs or signing his "John Henry."

Naturally, big Clint Eastwood had quite a following and even though a bit shy, he flashed his famous smile and chatted with fans.

James Garner, who has added a few pounds, definitely wasn't looking for any "tangles" his year. His spirits were high throughout the day and when he wrapped it up at the 18th he passed out numerous hugs, kisses and autographs.

When one lady told him that she missed his "Rockford Files" television series he gave her a big kiss and said: "Honey — Rockford is gone — Maverick is gone — so all you've got left is me!"

Another celebrity who never disappoints his fans is Efrem Zimbalist Jr. Zimbalist, who frequently puts in a plug for the "700 Club" (a religious television show), was obviously pleased when one fan told him that seeing him on the show had turned her life around — for the better.

All-American fellow Pat Boone relaxed by munching on candy bars and fruit and chatting about how much he enjoyed playing in the Crosby every year.

When Thursday's activities came to an end, Jack Lemmon headed to his favorite watering hole — Club XIX — where he was immediately surrounded by fans. Unperturbed Lemmon sipped his wine and said that the dream of his life was to make the cut. "Just once," said Jack. "That's all I ask." From somewhere in the room a voice came back with: "You'll never make it, Jack."

Perhaps one of the funniest comments heard throughout the tournament was when Phil Harris answered the question as to how long he would be around. After saying that he had been playing golf for about 30 years, Harris cracked up his audience when he said: "And I'll be around a long time yet — at least until the Atomic Energy Commission finds a place where they can bury my liver."

It would take a book to record the action and excitement of the four-day run. It's a bit like the theater: come rain or shine the show must go on. And since it's the best show in town you can bet that the 43rd Bing Crosby National Pro-Amateur Golf Championship is already anticipated.

EFREM ZIMBALIST JR. signed Linda May's program after Thursday's play.

THE CROSBY brothers, Nathaniel (left) and Harry, were all smiles as they finished Thursday's play.

Delightful pre-Crosby party

A HANDFUL of gold stars for a delightful pre-Crosby party given by Elizabeth Coyne at her beautiful Carmel Highlands estate!

Elizabeth was a leading hostess in Barbados for a number of years, so she knows what it takes to coordinate an entertaining evening. For beginners, there was music by David Lisle on piano who was joined by "Banjo Ben" Blakeman playing — what else — the banjo. Ben looked forward to teaming up with Phil Harris at the famous Paisano Gala the following evening.

With so much good music in the air, country and western singer/entertainer Virgil Griffin couldn't resist grabbing his guitar and joining in. Virgil had wrapped up a "Showcase" at the Sahara Hotel in Las Vegas the previous evening and was in high spirits. He and Blakeman had their audience laughing "until the tears ran" with their ad-lib showmanship.

Another guest who delighted guests with his singing was Sean O'Reilly, who would be perfect for an "Irish Spring" soap commercial. Irishman Sean has performed with, among others, the San Francisco Light Opera.

Elizabeth's home — which was once headquarters fo the Behavorial Sciences Institute — offered plenty of space for dancing and most of the guests kicked off their shoes and did just that.

Another sign of a good hostess is the mixture of guests and, as expected, Elizabeth did her homework. Some of those who socialized included Coots and Hildegarde Mitchell, Lucille Huntington and her date Dick Earl, Richard Tyler, Edith Alt, Michael Bobay (director of the Monterey Peninsula Dance Company), artist Hans Skalagard and his wife Mignon, Doug Madsen, Barbara Conklin and Bill and Toy Bryant.

Also making the scene were Seaside Police Commander William Gullett and his wife Jeannette, Maurice and Julia Havey, Juan Larmour, Peter Ringheisen, Constance Woods, W.J. Jacobson (lovingly called Count Dracula by Elizabeth), Jim Roe, Fletcher Robbe and numerous others including handsome David Perry, who was Elizabeth's co-host for the evening.

The delicious buffet dinner by candelight was catered by Triples Restaurant and included chicken yakatori, rice flamenco, tortellini ala gamboli, broccoli fleurettes with sauce moutarde and an array of exotic desserts.

The success of the party was summed up by Elizabeth when she commented: "Well, we passed the 2 a.m. mark and in this town that's a record!"

MIGNON SKALAGARD and Michael Bobay enjoyed the buffet supper.

AMONG THOSE who attended Elizabeth Coyne's party were Doug Madsen and Marsha Rider.

"There is nothing which has yet been contrived by man by which so much happiness is produced as by a good tavern or inn." –BOSWELL

Spanish ball planned Feb. 12

Costume or black tie will be the dress of the evening when the 45th El Baile de los Cascarones Ball gets underway in the Barbara McNitt Ballroom of the Naval Postgraduate School Feb. 12.

Festivities will begin with no-host cocktails in the ballroom at 6 p.m. Dinner will be at 8 p.m. and the Grand March at 9 p.m. Los Musicos de Monterey will entertain during the cocktail hour.

Many of the women plan to dress in elaborate Spanish gowns and mantillas and many of the gentlemen will dress in Spanish raiment or get into the spirit by wearing brightly-colored sashes around their waists or perhaps a somberero with their tuxedos.

The Cascarone is Monterey's historic ball which dates back to the 1700s when Monterey was capital of California during Spanish and Mexican rule. The name is derived from a very old custom associated with the ball.

Cascarones, or eggshells, beautifully decorated and filled with the finest confetti, are broken lightly over the heads of very special Senoritas by handsomely costumed gentlemen.

This is usually done between dances and may be an invitation to dance, share a glass of wine or just to catch the senorita's eye.

An award will be presented for the best costume and a special prize, "The Golden Egg," will be presented to the person who has worked the most tirelessly and with good results on behalf of the club. The Golden Egg is a large, egg-shaped artifact covered in velvet, sequins and satins. A special prize is tucked inside the egg.

Frequently the winner donates the egg back to the club so that it can be displayed in their 1830 adobe, The House of the Four Winds. This year's egg was fashioned by Mrs. Joseph Starbuck.

Ball chairwomen are Mrs. Frank Granito and Mrs. Eugene Ambrosia.

Cascarones have been the responsibility of Mrs. Thomas Farrel for the past several years. Assisting her for the 1983 ball are Mesdames Beatrix J. Garrett, John Gota, Leonard Green, Donald McKillop, James Moody, Harry O'Loughlin and Thomas Ozamoto.

Chairwoman of hostesses is Mrs. A.J. Melanson, who will be assisted by Frances Alexander, Mrs. Albert Brown, Donna Dougherty, Beth Hightower, Pilar Robinson, Jane G. Russell, Mrs. John Squier and Jean Theisen. Mrs. Joseph Toy is in charge of publicity.

Monterey Civic Club President Mrs. Hans Skalagard will welcome everyone and enumerate the traditions of the ball.

Entertainment will be provided by the Sal Mercurio Band.

Those who wish to make reservations should call Mrs. Joseph Real at 649-0950 or Mrs. Joseph Solis at 372-8271.

Helen Arnold clarifies position

In a story that appeared last week about a joint meeting between the Carmel Business Association and the city council, the Pine Cone/-Outlook inadvertently misconstrued a statement by Councilwoman Helen Arnold.

Mrs. Arnold was quoted as suggesting that a small "area of Piccadilly Park" should be considered as a new home for the CBA.

Mrs. Arnold actually suggested that the location of the proposed CBA office would be a small landlocked area behind the Merry Loom Weaving Shop, Spencer's Stationery and the Der Ling Court near Piccadilly Park.

Parent groups to reconsider school support

Doyle Clayton, Harold Santee and Joan Cathey favored the pay hike while board President Ken White and Trustee Barbara Sanford dissented.

Santee originally proposed a motion that would have limited Rand's pay increase to 3 percent, but it died for lack of a second.

The pay raises were granted despite opposition by more than 20 people in the audience, including the presidents of the Friends of the Carmel Unified Schools (FOCUS) and Carmel High School Padre Parents Club.

The FOCUS Board of Directors was scheduled to meet last night to review the ramifications of the board action, President Robert Fenton told the Pine Cone/Outlook yesterday (Feb. 9).

Fenton said he will ask the grant board of FOCUS to carefully screen all proposals. FOCUS should also use the district budget as a guideline before making donations, he said.

"I will ask the FOCUS board to modify the parameters on how grants are made," Fenton explained. "We want to see that the money cannot be used as substitute cash for the district.

'WE DO not want FOCUS money to substitute for the general budget. Indirectly, we would be subsidizing the school district," Fenton continued.

Despite his anger over the board action, Fenton said FOCUS should continue its work for the district.

"I think I can safely say, yes, we will continue to raise funds. Our concern is the students. We can't give up on the kids if we disagree with the school board," he said.

Fenton said FOCUS believes the district has good administrators, but that there is just not enough money for pay raises without financial damage to the general educational program.

Fenton said the vote angered him because the board did not listen to the public.

"I felt that the elected board members who voted for the administrative pay raises were insensitive to the most clear mandate from the public that I've ever seen. Everyone said no raises," he said.

"We're not saying anything against the competency of the administrators. That's not the point," he continued. "The board as elected representatives is not representing the citizenry."

The 15-member FOCUS group has donated about $75,000 to the district in the past three years.

Another parent club that donates money and volunteer time may also rethink its support of the schools.

"I think we're all going to talk about what's going on in our schools. We're going to have to think about it," Carmel High School Padre Parents Club President Anne Roberts said.

"We're not going to cut off our noses to spite our faces. We don't like in-fighting. I'm not sure what we're going to do," said Mrs. Roberts, who has four children in Carmel schools.

The board approval of the pay raises over the objections of the parents has destroyed morale and will no doubt cause many parents to rethink their commitments to the district, Mrs. Roberts said.

"As of today, I would think that we will continue to support the high school. Our means might be different. We will have to wait and see the ramifications of the board action," she said.

"We don't want to sabatoge the high school. We have an excellent working relationship with the high school administration," she said.

The Padre Parents Club is not opposed to raises for the school principals, but members believe that the central office administration should not receive a pay hike, Mrs. Roberts added.

PARENTS ARE also angry that the board did not heed their objections, Mrs. Roberts pointed out.

"They say they want to hear our input. But when we come out, nobody listens. Why bother coming?" she asked. "The message that came across loud and clear is that they don't want to listen.

"We're mostly concerned with the board's dismissal of all those people. We might not be going to any more school board meetings."

Padre Parents donated about $5,000 to the district in fiscal year 1981-82 and plans to increase that total by the end of the school year, she said.

Both Fenton and Mrs. Roberts opposed the raises at the Tuesday night board meeting. More than 20 parents and staff members also blasted trustees for their consideration of the pay raises.

Each speaker praised the administration, but said there is simply not enough money for raises.

Fenton, speaking as a parent and not member of FOCUS, said: "I wonder if we are being used and I am concerned that the Carmel Unified School District is emphazising salaries over education."

Mrs. Roberts told the board that when hard economic times hit corporations, company executives refuse pay hikes.

"If Chrysler can do it, Carmel can do it," she said. "I look at the school district as a business with the superintendent the chief operating officer. You don't give yourself a pay raise if you're losing money."

Parent Pat Bernardi questioned why parents should raise money to fund general education programs when the district is using that money to pay for administrative pay raises.

"I feel that times are tough right now and more and more of

Supervisors ask delay in Carmel LCP approval

CALIFORNIA COASTAL Commissioners will be asked today not to certify the Carmel Area Local Coastal Program by the Monterey County Board of Supervisors.

The board agreed Feb. 8 that it "feels strongly" that the remaining issues "should be resolved and the entire LCP certified at one time." The Coastal Commission meets in San Francisco today (Feb. 10).

Coastal Commission staff recommended the plan be certified, but that a portion of the plan be denied until beach access issues are worked out between the staff and Monterey County.

The staff has sought to allow "limited public access" to Malpaso and Yankee Point beaches in the Highlands area.

But the board of supervisors opposes access on those beaches because of the possibility of access becoming a "severe hazard to health and safety," said Supervisor Marc Del Piero.

Supervisor Michal Moore said the county believes the issue is "absolutely non-negotiable."

As a result, the board sent a letter drafted by Supervisor William Peters that asks the commission to continue its certification hearing on the plan.

"In making the request, the board recognizes that many property owners that have participated in the LUP process and who had hoped to finally gain certification this week might be further delayed and frustrated," said the letter.

And since the Coastal Commission staff recommends certification of most of the land use plan, "we shall not prohibit applications from landowners for development that (are) consistent with the resubmitted LUP," according to the letter.

Meanwhile, the Coastal Commission is also scheduled to hear testimony on the Del Monte Forest Local Coastal Program today.

The Del Monte Forest LCP covers the area within the gated regions of Pebble Beach. The plan was returned to the county late last year by the commission to resolve several issues.

Moore told his fellow supervisors Tuesday the county and the coastal commission staff had "basically resolved most of the issues."

But he said the county and the commission staff have not yet resolved four "major issues," including designation of recreational areas, the retention of Spanish Bay Road in its "present configuration, gate fees and access to Stillwater Cove.

Father Farrell's wisdom

No man is an island...

CARMEL ROTARY, LA PLAYA HOTEL
Oh almighty and eternal God, be pleased to bless this food to our use. Direct your love that is within us to bring mankind to unity and peace.

St. Paul of Tarsus lived long before Rotary, but in a letter to his own people, the Hebrews, he wrote these words that can apply to our Carmel Rotary: "We must consider how to raise each other to love and good deeds. We should not absent ourselves from meetings, as some do, but encourage one another all the more because, you see, it is later than you think."

This is my own translation from the Greek, so if you disagree, check with the original manuscript.

St. Paul also wrote: "The Lord said to me that my strength is sufficient for you. Strength is made perfect in weakness. I will glory in my infirmities with insults, hardships, persecutions, distresses, for when I am weak then I am strong."

No doubt you have your own examples of the great, famous and successful who have succeeded despite handicaps. Recently, the prize winning motion picture Chariots of Fire dramatized the lives of Harold Abrahams and Eric Liddell, who overcame social and physical handicaps to win gold medals in the 1924 Olympics.

My favorite success is Flannery O'Conner of Georgia, a great novelist of this century, who gloried in her infirmities. Let us thank God for both our strengths and weaknesses. However, they have no value unless we use them for the good of our neighbor.

Finally, George Bernard Shaw, the cynical Anglo-Irishman, wrote in Pygmalion: "Independence? That's middle class blasphemy. We are all dependent on one another, every soul of us on earth." Amen.

The Golden Years

By Myles Williams

Does the Social Security system make mistakes? Indeed. The agency does and encourages people paying into the system to check on the accuracy of their accounts. In 1979 and 1980, Social Security made some two million errors per year, which it is now correcting; the same numbers seem to hold for 1981-2. The agency suggests that a contributor check the accuracy of his or her account every two or three years.

Recent research suggests that having close social ties may help people to live longer and healthier lives. A nine-year study of 7,000 subjects by the University of California at Berkeley showed that the people who had fewer friends and fewer social contacts had a significantly higher death rate from heart disease than those who were less isolated.

ROBERT FENTON, president of the Friends of the Carmel Unified Schools (FOCUS), said his group will have to rethink its policy on financial grants to the district.

Trustees anger parent groups

the money we raise are going for direct classroom benefits," she said. "I would consider those the nuts and bolts of the curriculum."

"I feel as if we weren't buying those things they would be budget items," she continued. "They are the necessities. Believe me, what we're buying are the nitty-gritty things."

Parent Marcy Murray said it's time to "draw the line" on pay raises.

"The time has come when we need to draw the line across the board. There's no more money. We can't afford it anymore. It would be disastrous," she said.

Parent Jerian Crosby said the board needs to provide leadership and stop the funneling of general education funds to staff salaries.

"This time the ball is really in your court. You are in a position to take a leadership role in making a decision," she said. "I think you must remember and will remember that the district as a whole, has a product and that product is education."

PARENTS WERE not the only ones who protested the pay raise proposal.

"Teachers have a problem morale-wise when the guy at the top gets the greatest raise. It just doesn't taste well," said Jim Agan, negotiator for the Association of Carmel Teachers.

Jean Harnish, secretary to Carmel High School Principal Marsha Kading-Kelly, gave an emotional talk and read a letter she had written.

"It is with considerable dismay that I have learned of the 5 percent increase in the salary of the superintendent, bringing his yearly pay to $48,500," she wrote. "I wonder how such a raise can be justified in light of our declining enrollment and the reduction of two district schools.

"I wonder how such a raise can be justified when every other district employee received a 3 percent raise," she continued. "We've been told that our district is in extreme financial straits. If this is so, then I consider the board's action to be inappropriate and inequitable."

Mrs. Harnish pointed out that she has "great respect" for Rand but questions the amount of raise he would be given.

After reading the letter, Mrs. Harnish added: "No one goes to work in a school district to make money. The only way I can afford to work here is to have a second job."

Mrs. Harnish has worked in the district since 1966 and makes approximately $14,000 per year.

"I work very hard but I can't make it to the end of the month. I want you to know that there are a lot of hurt feelings at the high school. Why should one person (Rand) get more money?" she continued.

Rand pointed out that his contract was purposely altered to avoid the contingency clause that would have granted him additional salary increases dependent on more income from outside sources.

Rand said the board did not want him to be concerned with making decisions on spending if those decisions could indirectly benefit his own pocketbook.

Rand offered to accept the 3 percent plus possible increases based on additional funds, but later the board granted him the full 5 percent pay hike.

TRUSTEE DOYLE Clayton was the most vocal supporter of the pay raises.

"Bill Rand didn't ask for the raise. If you're going to blame anyone, don't blame Bill Rand, blame the school board," Clayton told the parents.

"I think we have an outstanding superintendent. I wish some of you would drive by this office on Sunday. If you did, you would see a blue car out front. That car belongs to Rich Hawkins (director of pupil personnel services, curriculum and instruction).

"I think we get a world's worth of work out of our administrators. I think they're worth what they're going to get," Clayton said.

"The morale of the administration in this district is just as important as anything else you can talk about," Trustee Harold Santee said.

Clayton's motion to grant the raises plus a 5 percent flat salary increase for Rand passed 3-2.

'The Trocks'

Comic dance artists tiptoe back to Sunset

Back by popular demand — because they demanded to return — are the hilarious dance artists of Les Ballets Trockadero de Monte Carlo, in one performance only at 8 p.m. Wednesday, Feb. 16, at the Sunset Theater, Carmel.

The company was founded in September of 1974 by a group of ballet enthusiasts and dancers to present a playful, entertaining view of traditional, classical ballet in parody form and en travesti.

From their first late evening performance, at midnight, in off-off-Broadway lofts, "The Trocks," as they were called, attracted attention from major reviewers and a wide-ranging audience.

They soon became an artistic and popular success which lead them to a new home in a small Soho theater. There they learned to blend a loving knowledge of dance, a semi-comic approach to their work and dance on pointe without falling flat on their faces unless they intended to.

A year later, they appeared at the Central Park Dance Festival in the Delacorte Theater, performed at the Brooklyn Academy of Music and had their longest season at the Martinique Theater in Herald Square, New York.

Les Ballets Trockadero became a professional touring company in 1976 and made their first appearance on national television in 1977 with Shirley MacLaine. Later that year they made their first appearance on Broadway with a two-week season at the Palace Theater. Soon they performed with a live orchestra. Then came numerous performances with symphonies throughout the world as their touring schedule increased.

The original concept of Les Ballets Trockadero has not changed since its inception. It is a company of professional male dancers who perform the full range of the ballet and modern repertoire, including classical and original works in faithful renditions of the style, manners and conceits of those dance styles.

The comedy is achieved by the incorporation and exaggeration of the foibles, accidents and underlying incongruities of serious dance. The fact that men take all the parts — heavy bodies delicately balanced on toe as swans, sylphs, water spirits, romantic princesses and angst-ridden Victorian ladies — enhances rather than mocks the spirit of dance as an art form, delighting and amusing the most knowledgeable as well as the novices in the audience.

The Trockadero's repertoire ranges from their signature piece, Swan Lake, Act II to Lamentations of Jane Eyre, a Grahamesque dance-drama of Victorian ladies. Their Go For Barocco is a Balanchine-like tangle of clock-work precision. Pharoah's Daughter presents a spectacular miniaturization of Petipa's view of Egyptian intrigue.

Among other pieces in their repertoire are The Dying Swan, Pas de Quatre, Carnaval and Yes, Virginia, Another Piano Ballet.

In the beginning, the repertoire consisted of ballets choreographed or staged by members of the company, but soon outsiders were asked to come and stage ballets. Among them were Trutti Gasparinetti, Marian Horosko, Alexander Minz, Yelena Tchernychova and Michel Katcharoff. The present repertoire includes ballets choreographed and staged by Betteanne Terrell, who is the associate artistic director, as well as Roy Fialkow, one of the company dancers.

Les Ballets Trockadero continuously adds new works to their repertoire and refine and polish their technique to bring enjoyment, comedy and their unique point of view to audiences throughout the world.

All seats are $12.50 and tickets should be ordered in advance by phoning 624-3996.

LES BALLETS TROCKADERO de Monte Carlo is back by popular demand with one performance only at 8 p.m. Wednesday, Feb. 16 at the Sunset Theater, Carmel. Pictured is the Corps de Ballet in a scene from Les Sylphides. All seats are $12.50. For reservations phone 624-3996.

Visit Frost's New England'

Academy award nominee and former National Geographic photographer Dewitt Jones will present and narrate his color documentary film, Robert Frost's New England, at 8:15 p.m. Thursday, Feb. 17 and at 2:30 p.m. and 8:15 p.m. Friday, Feb. 18, in the Sunset Theater, Carmel. The presentation is offered by the Explorama film series.

Jones uses the poetry of Frost as a basis for an exploration of New England and the people. The film draws on Frost's own experiences in New England, including his life as a farmer in New Hampshire, and illustrates the poet's strong belief in "education by presence."

A resident of Bolinas, Calif., Jones has produced films under the auspices of the National Geographic Society. He was nominated for two Academy Awards and won the coveted Cine Golden Eagle Award for the best environmental film of the year for his earlier film, John Muir's High Sierra. His still photographs have been used in numerous National Geographic issues.

Reserved seat tickets are available through all BASS outlets and at Abinate Music Store in Monterey. Credit card phone reservations can be made by calling Explorama at 415-771-4733.

Pianist Kahane will present solo concert

His program will include Mozart's Sonata in F, K. 280; Schumann's Fantasiestucke, Op. 12; Bartok's Suite, Op. 14; Waldesrauschen and Funerailles by Liszt and three etudes by Chopin.

A native of Los Angeles, Kahane studied at the San Francisco Conservatory and the Juilliard School of Music. Gallery Americana to display Caswell art

Helen Caswell is to open an exhibit of her latest works in the 10th annual one woman show Saturday, Feb. 12 at Gallery Americana located on the corner of Sixth Avenue and Lincoln Street, Carmel.

The public is invited to attend an artist's reception from 4 p.m. to 7 p.m., Saturday, Feb. 12.

Caswell's works characteristically focus on the charm and magic of childhood and her paintings transmit a loving view of adventure and discovery in a diversity of settings. Scenes of gardens, beaches, farms and homes range from intimate, single-figure, small paintings which portray intense curiosity over small facets of the earth's riches to large narrative paintings of Morris-Dancing and family gatherings.

The mother of five children, Caswell often uses family members as models, especially her grandchildren. She has won many awards for her seven books and her poems, as well as her internationally known paintings.

She is in the process of remodeling a farmhouse in Northern California, which provides her opportunities to express her love of nature and children amid orchards, vineyards and redwoods.

For more information on her work or the works of more than 50 artists included at Gallery Americana, phone 624-5071.

Film review:

Critic joins the crowd, 'Tootsie' is a winner

By LISA JENSEN

Tootsie. With Dustin Hoffman and Jessica Lange. Written by Larry Gelbart and Murray Schisgal. Directed by Sydney Pollack. A Columbia Pictures release. Rated R.

Dustin Hoffman, in Tootsie, is cast in role you'd think not even he could play: a woman. Actually, he plays a male actor disguised as a woman and carries it off beautifully. Tootsie is a thoughtful, literate and funny comedy.

Hoffman is Michael Dorsey, a struggling New York actor, drama coach and part-time waiter, who's so abrasive and demanding on the set that no one will hire him. In desperation, he dresses up as a woman, assumes a new identity, "Dorothy Michaels," and lands the part of a no-nonsense lady hospital administrator on a popular daytime soap opera.

"Dorothy" becomes a big hit on the show and Michael is thrilled by the acting challenge both on and off-camera. Appalled by the demeaning treatment he gets as Dorothy from the sexist director (Dabney Coleman) and the aging star of the show (George Gaynes), the actor starts ad-libbing a stronger feminist slant for the soap character and quickly becomes a media heroine.

His playwright roommate, Jeff (Bill Murray in a great deadpan performance), takes it all in stride. But the ruse wreaks havoc on Michael's relationship with his old friend, Sandy (Teri Garr), an insecure actress who was turned down for the same soap role and with whom Michael's having a half-hearted romance. Meanwhile he's falling in love with Julie (Jessica Lange), his beautiful soap co-star (and the director's paramour). Julie's father (Charles Durning) has a crush on "Dorothy" and the producers are so pleased with her success, they want to extend the contract for another year.

All of this might come off as campy farce if not for the sterling cast and witty script by Larry Gelbart (TV's *M*A*S*H*) and Broadway playwright Murray Schisgal. The situation is played for the more obvious laughs (at one point, Sandy thinks Michael is gay while Julie thinks "Dorothy" is a lesbian), but more provocative issues surface, too. As "Dorothy," Michael learns to assert himself in more subtle, effective ways and to cooperate with his colleagues, while experiencing a crash course in sexual politics.

Yet this new-found empathy doesn't turn Michael into a saint. He becomes committed to honesty and respect between the sexes, but is still too cowardly to level with Sandy. Then he's surprised to hear his smug rhetoric about their relationship echoed in the director's monologue about his affair with Julie. And while the script takes a chance by making a bogus "woman" a paragon of feminine courage and compassion (like the John Lithgow character in Gar p), at least it gives us a legitimate heroine: Julie's as warm and intelligent as "Dorothy" and a lot more honest.

Lange's performance as Julie is outstanding, but the center of the film is Hoffman's remarkable Michael/Dorothy. Michael is sympathetic and wise enough to know that "Dorothy is smarter than I am." And as Dorothy, Hoffman is more convincing as a woman than Julie Andrews was as a man in Victor/Victoria. He also communicates the actor's sheer joy of performing, as Michael puts Dorothy through her ever more demanding paces, exulting in the clothes, make-up, physical bearing and precise vocal inflections that have become the tools of his/her trade. It's a brilliantly layered performance, and although Michael's craftsmanship is evident in every move "Dorothy" (and her soap alter-ego) makes, there's never a trace of "actor" Dustin Hoffman onscreen to break the spell.

Of course, no man could ever get away with this charade. (Some photographer or wardrobe mistress would spot him in a week.) But we're willing to go along with the gag since the dialoge and fine performances ring true. And director Sydney Pollack (who also plays Michael's harried agent in some of the film's funniest scenes) captures the backstage showbiz milieu with affectionate precision, from auditions ("I can be taller!") to the hysteria of an unscheduled live TV performance. From the top of her auburn wig to the soles of her low-heeled pumps, this Tootsie is a winner.

Theater review

John O'Keefe's 'Ghosts' — an experience not to be missed

By SHIRLEEN HOLT

Last Friday night Carmel was given a rare treat — The Cherry Foundation production of Ghosts. No, not the familiar play by Henrik Ibsen, but an original by Bay Area playwright John O'Keefe.

It is refreshing to see such an unusual and creative endeavor attempted and even more enjoyable to view such a professional work of art.

Ghosts, a delicate mingling of theatre, poetry and visual effects, expresses the author's view of the after-life. Still caught in the pain of living, his characters are those who have died but have "not quite passed beyond us." Some are vague and shrink into the vast universe while others are still very powerfully present, though their bodies have left them.

With endless imagination and invention, each new idea is explored. Director Conrad Selvig uses a variety of techniques to create an eerie, supernatural and sometimes beautiful picture of the world beyond.

In one instance, actress Diane Holmes appears on stage with a single pane of glass and by moving with it, casts streaks of white and colored light around the room. She then recites the poetry into the glass and her breath makes a fog into which, like a ghost, her image fades away.

In another instance an actor appears in the traditional ghost's white sheet. The movements beneath that sheet achieve a visual effect of horror equal to any of our Hollywood special effects. The folds in the sheet look like strained muscles as the actor writhed within.

The acting was a joy to watch as the performers rode the lines and phrases like a carousel and let the intricate rhythms guide them. Michael Halton opened the play with a powerful account of a man leaving his body. Halton's emotional intensity rose and fell as he experienced entering the world beyond.

Rosemary Garrison was impressive as a tortured, aged woman. Garrison had the difficult task to laugh hysterically — a feat which she accomplished with ease. As an embittered murder victim, Diane Holmes delivered her lines with a sharp poignancy. Holmes's graceful movements contrasted sharply with her account of the brutal murder. Ieva Audejis was almost endearing as a ghost caught between earth and the universe. With a shy giggle she states, "We can be scary sometimes."

Perhaps the most memorable performance was given by Longfeathers. In each scene his presence exuded a sad, sometimes wistful feeling. The account of his death was sensitive; his soulful eyes peered into the unknown as his character vacillated between life and death.

The direction was superb. Conrad Selvig must be commended for his imagination and his strict adherence to detail. Each scene transition was orchestrated beautifully, without a hint of repetition.

The lighting, designed by Lance Jacobson and Conrad Selvig, served more than to merely illuminate. Though often too dark, the shadows cast across the faces of the actors amplified the intensity of the play.

In some scenes, cool blue lights were used to create a sense of diffusion and vagueness, while at other times harsh white lights served to express a character's more earth-bound connection.

Ghosts continues every Friday and Saturday night through Feb. 26. Reservations can be made by calling The Cherry Foundation, 624-7491.

A history of 'The Trocks'

By RICHARD TYLER

LES BALLETS Trockadero de Monte Carlo, soon to be nationally and internationally known as the "Trocks," was formed in September of 1974 by a group of ballet enthusiasts and dancers.

The group presented ballet classics and modern works which satirized the styles and conventions of dancers, schools of dance, and choreographic tradition. Though the company then included some women, the basis of the entertainment has always been the presentation of dance "en travesti" with men dancing the women's as well as the men's roles.

The first performance of the Trockadero took place in a loft on West 14th Street in New York City with a repertoire that included what has become the company's signature piece, Swan Lake, Act II, and Don Quixote, the only American version of that work until the American Ballet Theater's Mikhail Baryshnikov 1977 setting. Within two months, the Trockadero had received favorable notices and reviews in the New York Times, the New Yorker, and the Village Voice and moved to another loft where it performed at the Touchstone Theater. This Troisieme Saison Russe featured a Christmas Nutcracker and the still popular Go for Barocco.

The Trockadero moved into its first actual theater, the Van Dam in Soho, in March 1975. This first of two one-month seasons included premieres of Ecole de Ballet, and Pas de Quatre, and a re-staging of the company's Swan Lake. During these seasons, the Trockadero began to receive national attention with a Richard Avedon photo essay in Vogue and notices in Variety and Oui.

In September of 1975, the Trockadero, by then a company of 10 men, was invited to dance at the Central Park Dance Festival at the Delacorte Theater where it performed Swan Lake. The first appearance outside New York City was in late September of 1975 in Newport, R.I., in the Van Allen Casino, the only Stanford White Theater in America. That same month the Trockadero made their first appearance in a special invitational benefit performance at the Brooklyn Academy of Music's Le Percq Space.

The Trockadero's longest season — from November of 1975 to January of 1976 — took place at the Martinique Theater in Herald Square, New York. Phaedra, later to be expanded, had its premiere during this run. The first appearance of the Trockadero outside the United States was in late January, 1976, in Toronto at Seneca College. In February of 1976, the company returned to the Brooklyn Academy (at the playhouse) as part of a dance series for a one-week season. This engagement marked the first appearance of the Liberation of the American People in Homage to Isadora Duncan with the Trockadero's perennial uninvited guest artist.

After it qualified for National Endowment for the Arts support and after it signed with Sheldon Soffer Management as booking agent in 1976, the company began its present touring career with a week-long engagement at the Artpark Festival in Lewiston, N.Y. in which Les Sylphides and Dying Swan were premiered. The tour which followed included a return to Newport and the first of the Trockadero's appearances in Detroit, Berkeley, Scottsdale, San Diego, and Los Angeles, and a return to Toronto and the first appearances in Vancouver, Ottawa, and Montreal.

In March of 1977, the Trockadero was featured on national television in Shirley MacLaine's award winning hour-long special, another first. In April, the Trockadero appeared for a two-week season at the Palace on Broadway and received national notice, especially for the staging of Giselle with decor by Edward Gorey and for Yes, Virginia, Another Piano Ballet.

This year also marked the Trockadero's first appearance with a symphony orchestra to replace the ailing Edward Villella in a performance with the Baltimore Symphony before the group became part of the Summer Pops season of the Atlanta Symphony. The expanded touring schedule added Philadelphia, Washington, Miami, Alburquerque, Dallas, Halifax, and Calgary to the cities in which the Trockadero have appeared.

In 1978, the Trockadero's firsts included a six-week tour of South America with performances in Caracas, Sao Paulo, Buenos Aires, Santiago, and Mexico City, and six weeks in South Africa — Johannesburg and Cape Town. They ended the year with a special gala New Year's Eve presentation at the Dorothy Chandler Pavilion of Los Angeles' Music Center.

In the short time of its existence, Les Ballet Trockadero De Monte Carlo has established itself as an important national and international touring company. Now it consists of a permanent company of 14 dancers, two technicians, and a ballet mistress. "The Trocks" repeatedly have been asked to return for additional performances.

You can join this entertaining dedicated group when it appears at Sunset Theater at 8 p.m., Wednesday, Feb. 16. This will be their second appearance at the Center after they played to capacity audiences.

This year they plan to present their highly acclaimed version of Les Sylphides, Rachmaninoff's Spring Waters, Tchaikovsky's Marche Slav, Pas de Quatre, and The Dying Swan, repeats from last year's program, but overwhelmingly demanded by the ticket buyers, and Yes, Virginia, Another Piano Ballet, the great favorite of the Palace season.

There is some reserved seating available at $12.50. Call the director's office at Sunset Center, 624-3996, for more information. If you have not seen the Trocks, this may be your last chance this year.

Poet to read works

The Poetic Drama Institute/Cherry Foundation Theatre Project presents Bonnie Gartshore in the reading of her poems, Three Women of Piney, at 7 p.m. Sunday, Feb. 13, in Cherry Hall, Guadalupe and Fourth, Carmel.

Three Women of Piney is a group of poems about three generations of women. The first is Eliza Jane Tash, who crossed the plains to California in 1854. The second is her oldest daughter, Sara Paralee Tash Dosier, who was six years old at the time of the crossing and 16 years old when the family homesteaded at Piney Creek, west of Soledad. The third is Amy Dosier Gillelyan who lived most of her years at Piney. She died when she was 92 years old in 1966.

Bonnie Gartshore, journalist, poet and a native of Monterey, saw the three women of Piney in old pictures. She talked to family members to learn the various family stories about their lives and wrote the group of 19 poems. Karen Sheppard of Pacific Grove will also be present with slides to accompany some of the old family pictures.

Backgammon

Should you hit?

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

You, White, roll 6-1 in the diagrammed position. How do you play it?

Hitting the blot on Black's 9-point would improve not only your position in the race but also your chance to lock two Black men in your home board—assuming you can make a few points.

You wouldn't hit the blot if your roll were 4-3: you would happily make Black's 5-point. In the early stages of a game almost no move is better than making your opponent's 5-point.

That doesn't happen to be your choice in this case. This time you have the chance to make your bar point. Is this better than hitting the blot?

It's a close decision, since your bar point is worth little if Black manages to get out of your home board. Still, making the bar point tends to hold Black in your home board. If you can hold him back until you've made another point or two close to the 8-point or to the 6-point, you'll have an advantage worth far more than what you could gain by hitting a blot.

Would you like to have Alfred Sheinwold teach you how to play backgammon? A 12-lesson booklet will be on the way to you when you send $1 plus a stamped, self-addressed No. 10 envelope to Backgammon, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1000, Los Angeles, Calif. 90053.

Ring in 'The Year of the Boar' with a Chinese New Year party

The Chinese lunar New Year, 4681, the Year of the Boar, begins Sunday, Feb. 13 and will be celebrated in Monterey with a Dragon Dance on Saturday, Feb. 12 at 5 p.m. at Bonifacio Plaza between Alvarado and Calle Principal in Monterey.

Kung Hsi Faat Tsai, the wish of happiness and prosperity will be exchanged all over the world with New Year celebrations. Sponsored by the Fortune Cookie Restaurant in Monterey, the Dragon Dance celebration includes the raucous sounds of drums, cymbals and Chinese gongs as the dragon brings good luck and prosperity for the coming year.

The Dragon Dance will be performed from 1 p.m. to 2 p.m. at Northridge Center in Salinas on Friday, Feb. 11, Saturday, Feb. 12 and Sunday, Feb. 13. It will also be performed at Del Monte Center in Monterey at 3 p.m. on Saturday, Feb. 12 and Sunday, Feb. 13.

The Fortune Cookie Restaurant, located at 429 Alvarado St. in downtown Monterey, will celebrate the Year of the Boar on Friday, Feb. 11 with complimentary champagne and complimentary desserts with all dinners. A special gourmet dinner will be prepared in honor of the occasion. There will also be surprise gifts for the guests. To ensure good luck and prosperity, free fortune cookies and Chinese zodiac calendars will be available at The Fortune Cookie.

The Boar is one of the 12 animals, or signs, in the Oriental zodiac that follow in this order: Mouse, Ox, Tiger, Rabbit, Dragon, Snake, Horse, Ram, Monkey, Rooster, Dog and Boar.

Many Orientals believe that a person takes on some of the characteristics of the animal in whose year he or she was born, and that whenever that year in the cycle comes around, once every 12 years, it may bring that person good luck. This is also the time when important or significant changes in the pattern of life are most likely to occur.

The Chinese New Year celebration is the most important of all Chinese holidays or festivals. It can go on for many days, weeks or even a whole month. For centuries, in many agricultural communities all over the Orient, this is the period of rest and recreation, between two rice crops. It is the time for family reunion, much like Christmas is in America. On New Year's eve the Chinese are always home with their families, friends and relatives to exchange good wishes and gifts, to remember their ancestors and to take part in the festive activities. Three of the best wishes people in many Oriental countries extend to one another on New Year's Day are: happiness, wealth and longevity.

Terence Dolph presents a concert of original music at 8 p.m. Saturday, Feb. 12, at the Monterey Peninsula College Music Hall.

Presented by KAZU radio, the program will include two "forest sketches" for violin, Venerable Roots and Four Species in One Tree. There will be a selection for chambered beach rocks, natural stone instruments, and The Unbroken Chord for Chinese gongs.

The three compositions for the gongs are in the tradition of western music, their purpose being "to expose people to the sound of the Chinese gong and its world of rich sonority."

Tickets are $5 at the door and $4 in advance. They may be obtained at the Record Cove in Monterey, Recycled Records in New Monterey, Do Re Mi Music in the Barnyard, Carmel, Pilgrim's Way book store in Carmel and Lily Walker Music in Pacific Grove.

Author to sign books at Thunderbird party

Terry Allen and her former student and collaborator, Blackhorse Mitchell, will sign her new book, Writing to Create Ourselves: New Approaches for Teachers, Students, and Writers at a wine and cheese party from 2 p.m. to 4 p.m. Sunday, Feb. 13 at the Thunderbird Bookshop in The Barnyard, Highway 1 and Carmel Valley Road, Carmel.

Her other books, Navahos Have Five Fingers, co-authored with her husband, and Miracle Hill: The Story of a Navaho Boy, co-authored with Emerson Blackhorse Mitchell, also will be available. Both are published by the Oklahoma University Press.

A resident of Carmel, Allen is a professional writer whose works include not only books but plays and screenplays. A founder of the writing department of the Institute of American Indian Arts in Santa Fe, New Mexico, Allen later was director of communication skills for the Bureau of Indian Affairs and an associate staff specialist and lecturer at the University of California at Santa Cruz.

Allen is also an artist whose watercolors will be on display in the main dining room of the Thunderbird Bookshop.

T.D. Allen worked with students of predominantly Native American origins, many of whom used English as a second language, while writing her new novel. Her methods, arrived at on the job, work equally well with any and all students previously silenced by traditional approaches to language usage.

Allen shows that, by helping a student discover what it is he has to say that is uniquely his own, the student motivates himself to gain language skills and define himself as a person. By writing, we create ourselves.

Her approach is diametrically opposed to the drill and workbook routines of established methods — were emphasis is placed first on learning the rules and regulations of language, with the assumption that clarity and fluency will follow. She shows the reverse to be true. Students will insist on learning grammer and syntax in their functional capacity — as a means to writing so that someone else will want to read what they have to say.

As a result of her work with English-poor and bilingual students, it is Allen's contention that much of what passes for bilingual education today is no more than an expensive way of delaying or precluding students' effective use of English.

Her students learned the language of the world in which they must function by discovering that English need not be viewed as a tool of oppressive authority but could be seen as an avenue towards their own self-discovery and self-expression — a way to create themselves.

THE APPLE ORCHARD is the title of this oil painting by Helen Caswell on display at her one-woman show at Gallery Americana, located on the corner of Sixth Avenue and Lincoln Street, Carmel. Gallery hours are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. daily.

New theater group forms

The Monterey Theatre Ensemble was recently established to present a performing arts magazine and a series of multi-media seminars under the direction of John and Gregory Light, producing directors.

"MONTE" is an association of artists, artisans, the people and communities of the Monterey Peninsula to develop a professional non-profit resident theatre.

Their first year as an ensemble was one of research and planning. They are now in their second year and plan to focus on education, promotion and fund raising.

Their initial efforts will be the publication of Programme, a journal of the organization's plans and events, current news on local and regional performing arts, with audition, interview and season schedules, articles, essays and commentary. Each issue will feature an organization and a personality from the Monterey theater community. It will be available to active patrons and artists of the organization and offered to local theaters and performance associations as a cover for theater programs in conjunction with a computerized ticket printing service.

A series of seminars for the general public will begin this April with a program on the history of local and regional theater throughout the U.S., with special emphasis on the community supported professional theater, its rewards and benefits. Guest speakers, film and video clips, music and live entertainment will be periodically featured in the "space-tailored" presentation for theaters, schools, churches, clubs and homes.

MONTE is the vision of two local brothers, John and Gregory Light, who have a comprehensive background in professional theater. John is an alumnus of the Advanced Training Program of the American Conservatory Theatre where he later entered the company and served as directorial apprentice to William Ball, as a director in the Young Conservatory and Playwrights' Forum and as coordinator and executive liaison in casting and contracts for the 10th anniversary season and the 1976 summer tour of Russia.

His credits on Broadway include two Tony award winning associations: one with Jack O'Brien and Sherwin Goldman on the Houston Grand Opera production of Porgy and Bess, currently in revival, opening at Radio City Music Hall in March; and as assistant to Ellis Rabb in preparing Royal Family for national tour. The San Diego Old Globe, the Ahmanson Theater and Westwood Playhouse in Los Angeles, Pacific Ballet, LaMama and several film and television credits round out John's experience as an actor, director and producer.

Gregory attended San Jose State University as a major in theater and became an incorporating director of the Madonna Theatre, now a scholarship program for Santa Clara County drama students. Gregory's technical expertise and directorial experience offered him the opportunity to serve as Gavilan College's Theatre Technician for over three years and as Theatre Specialist for the City of Santa Clara's summer recreation program as well as educational theater assignments with Los Angeles Valley College and Eastern Washington State University.

The Monterey Theatre Ensemble welcomes inquiries and community input. For more information, phone 646-0756 or write P.O. Box 2741 Monterey, CA 93940.

LOCAL ALIENS FACE ARREST AS FEDERAL MEN LAUNCH PROBE

Possible arrest and deportation faced this week a number of aliens who are said to have gained illegal admittance into this country and are now residing in and around Carmel.

A secret investigation, the Pine Cone learned, has been conducted here for some time by members of the federal immigration department and several residents have been questioned and grilled.

The investigation, it is understood, is being conducted by P.J. Farrelly and Leo Smith, both federal immigration inspectors. Among the aliens quizzed were one Chinese cook in Carmel and two Japanese in the Pebble Beach area.

Several Russians, one Englishman and a Hindu, who are living in and around Carmel have also been questioned. So far, no arrests have been made, pending a further investigation of the cases involved.

PROTECTIVE ASSOCIATION TO ASK NEW ZONING

The Carmel Protective Association has withdrawn its opposition to the Surf 'N Sand off-sale liquor license. Instead, the group announced this week that it would concentrate its efforts to work out with the city attorney a new zoning ordinance to give more effective protection to the residential area adjoining the business district.

The following is the Assocation's formal statement: "The Carmel Protective Association, in conjunction with the City of Carmel has established the principle of control of liquor sales adjacent to the residential area of the city.

"The city ordinance prohibiting the establishment of liquor stores in areas adjacent to the residential area has been upheld by the Alcoholic Beverage Control Appeals Board and in the Superior Court of the County of Monterey.

"Now that the principle has been established, the Carmel Protective Association has decided that their efforts should be coordinated with those of the City of Carmel to provide adequate zoning in carrying out the desired effect. Consequently the Association has decided not to continue to use further legal action in protesting the application of Paul E. Chedester and Robert Aebersold for a liquor license for the Surf N' Sand Drug Store, which is now in operation. A hearing on the motion to set aside appeal of the Carmel Protective Association on the recent decision of the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board on the appeal of Paul Chedester and Robert Aebersold has been set for Thursday, Feb. 13."

CITY POLICY ON SECOND KITCHENS UNCHANGED

The city council unanimously approved a policy statement regarding second kitchens in the residential zone at its regular monthly meeting Tuesday night.

Council members and the building department felt a policy statement was necessary since the ordinance dealing with authorization of non-conforming second kitchens (those built before 1929) was still on the abeyance calendar and some misunderstanding had been evident.

The policy statement reads: "The city council's policy in regard to second kitchens in single family residence buildings in the residential zone has not changed.

"All second kitchens," the statement continues, "that have come into existence after June 5, 1929 are illegal and shall be eliminated when brought to the attention of the chief building inspector in accomplishing this.

"Second kitchens that can be proven to have existed before June 5, 1929 are considered legal, but non-conforming and may be continued as long as they meet health and safety standards."

The policy statement simply emphasizes the council's previous position and leaves everything as it now stands.

VAST COLLECTION OF VALENTINES TRACES ERAS OF COURTSHIP

Feb. 14 has special meaning to people in love. The feast of Saint Valentine, however, has taken a back seat to the exchange of cards inscribed with verses declaring amorous devotion.

In the last 20 years, Louise Shaw has become known as the "Valentine Lady" of Carmel for her collection of 3,000 of these romantic cards.

Valentine's Day celebrates the festival of a Christian martyr beheaded in Rome in the year 270. The exchange of cards on this day is said to have no connection with the saint. Some researchers, however, say the Roman Catholic Church used Feb. 14 as the day to Christianize the pagan holiday of Lupercalia. On that day, girls' names were placed into a box. Boys then selected the name of their "girl" for the following year.

Mrs. Shaw regrets the decision by the Roman Catholic Church to remove Valentine from its official list of saints. "It was a very sad day for me," she said.

"The heyday of valentines came between 1830 and 1850," said Mrs. Shaw. "The first valentine message was sent in 1415 by the Duke of Orleans, who was imprisoned in the Tower of London. It's not known whom he sent it to."

The oldest valentine in Mrs. Shaw's collection is a single page Bartolozzi engraving titled The Endless Knot of Love. Two cupids are shown entwining ribbons and flowers.

Mrs. Shaw began collecting valentines as a child. They were saved by her mother and returned when she reached adulthood.

It wasn't until 1952 that Mrs. Shaw became serious about collecting valentines. An assortment of antique valentines on sale at a department store caught her fancy. She began looking for cards in antique shops. As her collection grew, so did the popularity of her talks each spring on the history of the patron saint of lovers.

Skiing and broken legs

By AL AUGER

'GO SKIING? No way, I'm not going to break my leg.'' The typical response from the non-skier. The myth of the dangers involved is still strongly embedded in the minds of non-skiers. And myth most of the stories are.

Equipment has made quantum leaps in sophistication and technology, and offers both better and safer skiing. Most injuries incurred today are of a minor nature and their occurances far less than even a few years ago.

At the annual Ski Media/Industry Seminar held recently in San Francisco a blue ribbon panel of ski instructors, sports physicians and emergency medical experts spoke on the subject of "Ski Injuries — Their Nature, Prevention and Rehabilitation."

Otto Tschudi, director of skiing at Winter Park, Colo., brought some interesting ideas on non-medical prevention of ski injuries. To get his subject off on a positive note, Tschudi gave some national figures on ski injuries.

"According to the National Ski Patrol," Tschudi said, "the typical accident happens to a 13-year-old girl and is a knee accident. The 'typical accident' is the one we see most often. It happens in the late afternoon.

"The national ski accident rate is 2.1 per thousand and only about 30 percent of that 2.1 ratio is considered serious."

Tschudi added that about 80 to 85 percent of hill accidents are caused by out-of-control skiers. Most ski areas give their ski patrolmen "police" responsibility to remove dangerous skiers from the hill.

Another element of the out-of-control skier, Tschudi said, is the skier with the Walkman or Astral Tuner-tye headsets. They are completely unaware of much of what is going on around them and can't hear yells of warning.

"I don't think skiing is a dangerous sport today. Bindings come to mind first. We have bindings now that release in more ways than ever before. However, bindings are anti-friction devices and if you don't clean your boots or take care of settings it really doesn't help what kind of bindings you have.

"Something people don't think about is clothing. Heat for the body is like oil for the engine. If you're cold or your feet hurt from bad boots, you're going to be miserable and you're uptight.''

NASA research has affected skiing, Tschudi said. The foot warmers and some gloves on the market today are examples he cited. "So clothing is very important to safety," Tschudi added.

"Every ski should be equipped with brakes. They can prevent 10 percent of injuries. Bindings that hang onto your skis and boots in a bad fall can cause serious spirals (break).

"Most accidents happen on sunny days because skiers get over-confident," Tschudi pointed out.

Other factors covered were the growing lack of manners on the hill and reckless teenagers.

The ranking of skiing as a dangerous sport in this country has dropped rapidly every year. The technology of equipment engineering had practically removed most of the relative dangers to our limbs from skiing. As Tschudi pointed out, the real dangers — and prevention — now lie within ourselves: proper conditioning, clothing and equipment, professional lessons at the beginning and good ski manners.

Put all these factors together and there's no reason why anyone — at any age — couldn't find the pleasure and safety the majority of skiers enjoy today.

Gymnasts take honors home

THE RISING Star Gymnastics Training Center based at Sunset Center has competed well in its first two meets of the Class IV season. The first meet was held in Fresno Jan. 29. Taking top honors were Jenni Foster and Nancy Penn. Jennie (right) won first place in the all-around division for ages 15 and over. Nancy (left), who competed in the 12-to-14 age division, took home a first place ribbon for the vault event. She also placed fifth in the floor exercise and sixth in the uneven bars. Over 60 gymnasts competed in the meet. One week later, Feb. 5, the five-member team won 17 awards in a Fremont meet. Three other teams competed: Daly City, Sloopy's, and Gymnastics West Fremont. Jenni placed second all around, in the vault and the uneven bars; Nancy took home two thirds, two seconds and a first in the vault. Tracy Martinsen, competing in the ages 12-14 division, captured four sixth places. Jennifer Johnson competed in the ages nine-to-11 division and took home two fifths, a fourth and two seconds. Coach of the team is Kathleen Christman. For more information, call 624-4002. (M.G. photo.)

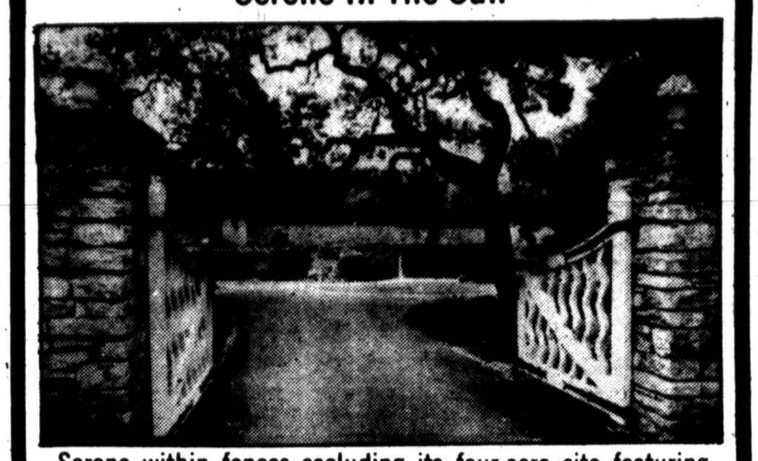
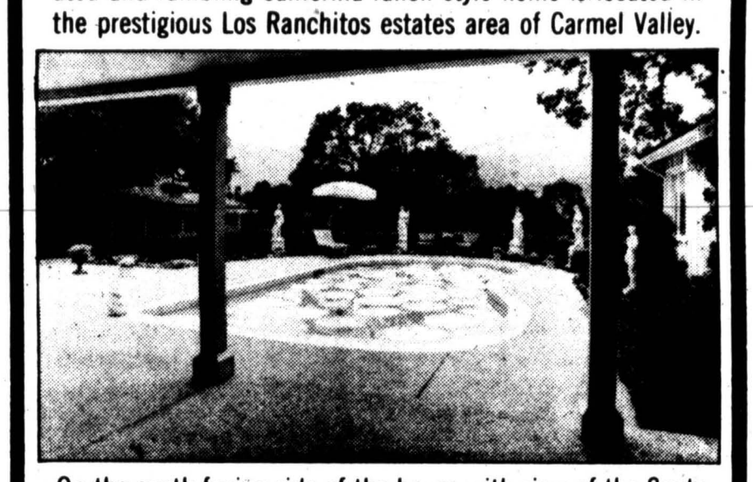
Serene In The Sun



Serene within fences secluding its four-acre site featuring graceful oaks, fragrant pines, cypresses and flower-bordered lawns, this shake-roofed, adobe and redwood, recently renovated and rambling California ranch style home is located in the prestigious Los Ranchitos estates area of Carmel Valley.



On the south-facing side of the house with view of the Santa Lucia Mountains, window walls provide access not only to the patio with a swimming pool but also to a nearby deck with a tiled spa as well as to the charming, two-room guest house.

The living room with beamed wood ceiling, random plank hardwood floor and adobe fireplace flanked by bookcases is off a dramatic entry traversing the width of the house to a picture window framing patio and pool. Off the entry, too, are a dining room with a fireplace and a butler's pantry with bar, both correlated with a custom kitchen featuring every cooking convenience, fold-out pantry, tile-topped cabinets and a big, butcher block, center island embracing a breakfast bar.

Spot lighting, a beamed ceiling and a brick fireplace are in the carpeted library beyond which are both the similar study and the spacious, skylighted, flexible-use studio/workroom.

This wallpapered, carpeted bedroom opens to the spa deck and is separated from another and similar bedroom by space containing two dressing areas, one with bidet and laundry closet, both with commode, walk-in wardrobe, tiled vanity and steps to a tiled, skylighted, sunken shower room. Another bathroom and a three-car garage, exterior lights and sprinkler system add to desirability of this peaceful property. $1.5 million.
